BEYOND EXPECTATIONS

Three years. That adds up to almost one-fifth of my total life experience; a sizeable chunk of time for someone who is only seventeen. Even beyond the mathematics of it, these last few years have seemed like a lifetime in themselves. This is not because they were spent in a haze of tedium as some high school students might think, but rather because they have contained so many fascinating experiences that have profoundly changed the way I live and view life. Perhaps not so coincidentally, most of my time during these years has been spent in the halls of Strathcona Composite High School. Thus, I feel it necessary to discuss the reasons why Scona has surpassed even my most idealistic expectations of what high school should be like.

When I first set foot in the Michener Entrance in my grade ten year I was struck by the overwhelming spirit that seemed to emanate from the students. After three years here and numerous visits to other high schools, I am still amazed by the intense enthusiasm that the student body of Scona seems to possess. The directionless apathy usually associated with the youth of today is absent in most Scona students. One could argue that students are only getting caught up in the intoxicating dramatic fervour that surrounds track season and saturates pep rallies, but these are only the superficial manifestations of the intangible excitement that permeates Scona's halls. So what innate qualities create such a stimulating atmosphere? One of the most important aspects of Scona is the unique staff. Teachers at Scona don't just instruct their students, they befriend them. For a school as large as Scona, the level of individual attention that students receive is phenomenal and the learning environment that staff have created is one that fosters personal development as well as interpersonal, group learning. The diversity of extra-curricular activities is another major contributor to the effervescence of Scona. Sports teams, radio clubs, science fairs, drama festivals, motivational speakers and career days are just some of the events open to students. From track team to computer club, Scona's eclectic mix of extracurricular programs encourages students to try new things and get the most out of life.

Probably the single most important facet of Strathcona's character is the student body itself. Students have the luxury of enjoying a completely friendly and accepting atmosphere. There is a simple beauty in being able to walk down a school's halls as yourself, completely assured that you are accepted despite, or more likely, because of all the little quirks in your character. To be able to develop strong bonds with other people that don't have to be based on skin colour, to be able to try new things, be crazy and let your own unique personality shine without fear of ridicule but with anticipation of admiration, and to be able to be a part of an institution dedicated not only to striving for higher learning but to inspiring its students to reach their potential and make the most of their lives; this is what attending Strathcona is all about. Does Strathcona Composite go beyond my expectations? You bet.

By Grade 12, registration day becomes easy - especially when you know its your last time!

Grade Ten's

After nine years of drudge, sweat and tears, we have finally made it to high school. It is now time to find out if the rumours of freshmen froshing are true. As we enter the world of "mature adults"(where would they get an idea like that), we discover the joys of waking up at 6:00AM to catch the bus, sitting through an exhausting 80 minute long class, and learning the difference between the "small gym" and the "large gym"(it took me awhile to learn that we even had more than one gym). Once we get used to it, we realize that high school can be a lot of fun. Well, of course, excluding the required "social dancing" unit in Phys.Ed 10 (just where do teachers expect us to dance the American Promenade and the Polka anyway). But we do learn about the heavenly spare, choosing our own lockers, eating and chewing gum in class, and the convience of having Whyte Ave so close.

By the time we reach grade 11, we'll be wiser and filled with experience. Next year, we'll also know that our yearbook pictures are taken during Registration.

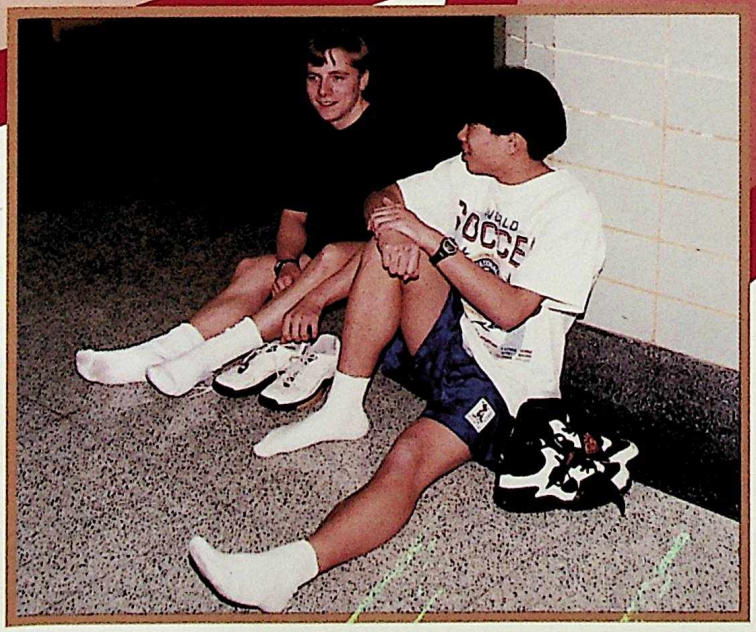
Grade Eleven's

Grade 11 - it's the most unstressful year in high school. You've gotten over the hurdle of making new friends, learning the layout of the school (most people have at least), and getting used to those endless 80-minute periods in Grade 10. However, you still haven't hit the trauma of Grade 12 with the worries of diploma exams, graduation, post-secondary institutions and career choices. The only taste of this comes with CALM 20, the course designed to expose students to the "Real World". Attendance isn't exactly considered highly important to many Grade 11's - missing class a few times won't result in dire consequences. But in Grade 12 - well, you may even need to learn a few things taught in class for the dipmlomas!

- Angela Chiang



Mark van Manen and Ken Tang relaxing after (or during) a phys-ed 10 class.

Grade Twelve

Grade 12 - the final year of high school. The last year you have to make your mark on Scona. It's here at last - and afterwards - who knows? So party hard while you can. Real life is just around the corner. University, NAIT, Grant McEwan, international travel, or an extra semester or two at Scona - the choices that face us next fall are endless. Grade 12 means stress - you're nearly "grown up" and have no clue what you want to be when you grow up. Solution: Don't grow up. But never fear, we have Mr. Manson to counsel us through it. Diplomas? Pshaw. Just because one little exam is worth 50% of your mark for the course doesn't mean that cramming the hour before the exam on the bus isn't enough studying. Then come the ides of May, and Grad, the "most important night" of your high school career, and then Aftergrad, where you try to forget it all. Before you know it you've learned all that Scona can teach you, and you are ready to go out and conquer the world. Good luck Scona!

Tom Jones

This play by David Rogers used the elements of mystery, family honor, and true love to create a hilarious satire of 18th century England's rigid class structure. Using the most intricate costumes and sets ever, it smashed all previous attendance records. Over 450 people attended the second night's performance alone!

Partridge (played by Adrian Ellis), the play's host, lead the audience into the lives of Squire Allworthy's family. The Squire (Davis Foth) and his sister Bridget (Kelly O'Donnell) discover a foundling, supposedly born of their servant Jenny Jones (Sasha Mackie). The Squire raises Tom (Aaron Talbot) as his own son, but the matter his of illegitimate birth gets Tom into trouble. His questionable heritage prevents him from marrying his true love Sophia (Luara Inglis), and so Tom journies to London to seek his fourtune. Is Tom's life quiet after this? No, he's followed by Sophia, her father, Mr. Western (John Davidge) and almost every inhabitant of the town they call home. The collection of strangers they meet, plot twists they encounter, and laughs they inspire make Tom Jones one of the most satisfying plays seen at Scona in years.

I believe that it was Oscar Wilde who once said, "Don't let school interfere with your education." And while there are, of course, multitudes of extra-cirricular activities to get involved with to broaden your horizons, there is also much to be said of just hanging around with your friends. Luckily, Scona is surrounded by places to go and things to do. In the spring and fall, the lawns are sprinkled with groups of students playing hacky sack, talking, studying, or just enjoying the sun beating down on their faces. For those who are willing to take a little stroll, Whyte Ave, with its many coffee bars and cafes is only a few minutes away. Many spares have been spent by Scona students in these fine establishments with a latte and some homework or a cafe book. For those who prefer a challenge, there are always card games going in the cafeteria or the hallways. Moments like these are what will remain as memories of Scona long after we've forgotten what a covalent bond is, after we can't remember how to scan a sonnet, after we've discovered that derivatives do not apply to the real world. Recreational time spent in the hallways, on the track, and in the field is what make high school worth waking up for.

Welcome Week

Grade 10. High school. Land of maturity. That was my vision of high school. But after the second week into school my whole perspective was changed. I saw grade 12's fighting over chairs in a game of musical chairs (whatta game for gr.12's to play?!), I saw people passing people in mid air! Is this what high school people did in their spare time? No, these were just events set up during Welcome week to get people off on the right foot. Even though these things seemed weird and a little inapropriate for high school kids, it was fun to do and watch! As I stood there watching the people pass, I thought to myself "This is their idea of fun???!!!", but as I saw them I wanted to be apart of it, so I tried it.

I can't even think of the words to describe what I was feeling, but I knew from then on that this was going to be an interesting year! Then there was clubs day. Well I knew there were a lot of things to get into at Scona, but that day in the Michenar entrance was something else! Debate, Young Life, Amnesty, the Newspaper and a dozen other things were right there waiting to be joined. I couldn't decide what to join first! There was a club for everything; if you like writing there was newspaper, if you like adventure there was Young Life, and if you liked getting in touch with you inner self there was Yoga!

School Spirit

The year's first pep rally was a "roaring" success as the Lords (literally) strutted their stuff. The men of the swim team and the Senior Boys volleyball team took it all off. And, if that wasn't exciting enough, the pep rally featured surprise appearances by guest stars from the city's other high schools. But, win or lose, they were no match for the spirited Lords and their fans. There were also cameos by (the coffee talk lady from SNL) and Scona's own mascot, Gaylord the lion. But as we all know, Scona excels in other areas as well as athletics, and the pep rally was a chance for other groups to display their talents. The Drama performance whetted our appetites for the upcoming production of Tom Jones with a number from "Grease" and the Jazz band rocked the house. This year's pep rally was different from those which preceded it in that it had no theme. No matter, as our South African exchange student Fearne Gilson and Crystal Drew led the crowd in chanting S-C-S-C-O-S-C-O-N-A LET'S GO! and showed us what being a Lord is all about.

Lords of the Crowd

There's nothing quite like the roar of the fans cheering you on. Scona fans can be counted on to be the loudest, the most enthusiastic, and the best dressed (in red and gold, of course). With Gaylord, our mascot, to lead us, we help to push our teams to victory. Volleyball, basketball, swimming, track, or Journal Games; it doesn't matter, Scona fans are there for the teams, especially at cities and provincials. A new phenomenon this year at Scona was the Holiday Classic basketball tournament, which drew many students to the bleachers to catch some of the action and to cheer on the home team. The spirit of the Scona Lords is shines on through in the cheers and chants of the fans. In fact, when the Lords football team entered a fan challenge with (JP? Eastglen? didn't they switch it?), Scona fans won easily, and went on to help the Lords to win their game. Scona's athletes train hard, and yet the cheer of the crowd is enough to make them run faster, jump higher, and throw harder than they ever thought they could.

Halloween

Halloween - it's just one giant "come-as-you-wish-you-were" party. Here at Scona, Halloween featured a mummy wrap for those with a masochistic desire to be embalmed in toilet paper, and a costume contest for those brave enough to dress up. Who said Halloween is for the little kids? At the annual costume parade, held this year in the cafeteria, there wasn't a witch or ghost in sight, but cross-dressing seemed to be a popular theme for both genders. We had everyone from Elvis, who just came for the cafeteria's legendary chicken burgers, to Kermit the Frog, who blended in nicely with the green of Scona's hallways. Trick or treat anyone?

Howdy pardner! Here's Ryan "Ringo" Checkel giving his audience a cowboy salute.

Valentine's Day

Valentines Day - the name brings so many different memories to different people that you'd swear it happened more than once each year. For some people it's the memory of a boyfriend or girlfriend who spent that special day with them, or for others it's the day when color co-ordination and fashion take a backseat to mushy sentimentality. Still others see it as simply a chance to look forward to spring, and have one last silly day of the winter. Whatever the feelings, there's no better place to experience the day than here at Scona. From the hilarious Dating Game to Candygrams to seeing everyone else dressed up in red, there's a part of the day that's just right for anybody.

Humiliation can be so entertaining. Quite a crowd gathers each year for the dating game.

Christmas

Twas the week before Christmas and all through the school all the creatures were stirring, even the mule. Not that we had a mule at Scona for Christmas, but it rhymes. The week leading up to the long awaited two week Christmas holiday was filled with excitement and activities.

This year, activities included the annual Christmas Lit and Scona Pride's Santa Sit. Festive cheer was provided by the Radio Club in the mornings as Christmas carols chimed merrily from the loudspeakers.

Santa Claus even came to visit those who had been naughty and nice, and for a dollar students could get their picture taken upon Santa's lap. The proceeds from this endeavor went to support Scona Pride's projects in the community.

The Christmas Lit always showcases some of the unique talent which walks the halls of Scona. This year's edition featured wide variety of performances, with the debut performance of the Murphy House Band, a flute and piano duet, and a rendition of a classic Monty Python sketch, among others. After that, students enjoyed a blissful two weeks free of essays, labs, and exams. That was the best Christmas present of all!

The Battle of the Bands saw many talented musicians from more schools than just Scona.

Battle of the Bands

Rock and Roll. Ask anyone, and they'll tell you it's the one thing this generation has in common with the ones before it. So why shouldn't Scona try to fan the flame a little, it would be fun right? Exactly. Several bands featuring Scona students put on their best show in the hopes of entertaining a crowd, and maybe even proving they're the best that this school has to offer. Whether any one of them wants to make it big, or just say to their children that they were a rock n' roller when they were young, they all put on quite a show. The bands played anything from the hard sound normally seen in a band like Nirvana to the acoustic folk rock of someone like Sarah MacLaughlin.

When everything was finished, it could be said beyond a doubt that this was enough of a success to hold the second annual Battle of the Bands next year.

Look out Sarah MacLaughlin and Jane Siberry, here comes Lisa Jaster.

Um, could you show a liitle more skin? Sittanur Shoush shows just how much fashion there is in today's music.

International Week

One of the new and different things that this year's Student's Union did was present the first ever International Week. Throughout the week, students were given a chance to display and celebrate their cultural heritage in addition to learning about international affairs.

At lunch, speakers came in to speak on a variety of international issues, from development to human rights.

The highlight of the week was the International week assembly, which featured an international fashion parade with fashions from Germany, Japan, Mexico, and all other corners of the globe. There were also performances of traditional African and Bangra dances, there was music, there was singing, and a delightful and enlightening time was had by one and all.

To round out the week, displays were set up at lunch, and Amnesty International had an international bake sale.

One Act Festival

Take 13 enthusiastic, inexperienced directors, their faithful and trusty sidekicks (or stage managers), lighting and sound technicians, over 40 experienced and not-so-experienced actors, limited rehearsal space, no budget, and six weeks, and what do you get?

Either disaster, or one of the best Scona Drama Festivals ever! Every year, Drama 30 students are given the freedom to direct a play of their choice. This year, 12 one act plays (two of which were written by the directors) and one movement collective were performed March 15th-17th. It was a tremendous learning experience for all involved. Many thought that directing was going to be easy. As one actor put it, "Why do they get so uptight? All they have to do is sit there and watch." Nothing could be further from the truth. From auditions to opening night, the one act consumes its director's entire life. They show up at school at 6:00 am for rehearsals. They start muttering things to themselves and wearing bannana stickers on their foreheads. However, the cast and crew don't have it any easier. Actors scurry around attempting to memorize lines in order to escape the wrath of their directors. Stage managers try and scribble down blocking. Anticipate what the directors want even before they ask for it. Listen to the directors complain and worry and scream.

Festival is a profound and highly personal experience for everyone involved. Lessons that the cast and crew of these productions learned things that can never be taught in a classroom. Festival gives major roles to people who otherwise might not get the chance to be a star. It gives Drama students a chance to dirtect; for most of them, the only chance they'll get. Special bonds develop between people who otherwise would not speak to each other. It brings stress, ulcers, frustration, and indescribable joy to all those involved.

This year, an unprecedented 13 plays were produced. There was tough competetion for the two places in the city-wide Drama Festival. In the end, The Open Meeting and The Actor's Nightmare were chosen. Adrian Ellis and Aaron Talbot won honorable mentions for acting. After participating in the Festival, one understands why the symbol for Drama is a sad mask and a happy mask. Together.

Western Days

The old west paid a short visit to Scona for a few days in the month of April. Students, parents and teachers all searched through their closets for the classic western clothes that never quite seem to go out of style. Whether it was just donning a stetson for a day, or trying to look completely authentic, many of Scona's people got into the spirit of things.

The pancake flippers had an early start as they prepared to make breakfast for the entire school. Free grub has a way of cheering the gloomiest faces (or those that are just tired).

High noon Scona time (that's 11:00am everywhere else) saw the arrival of the best square dancing this side of 1891. Lords (and Ladies) quickly got into the action, stompin' and clappin' along to the music. As always, Western Days let everyone sit back and enjoy a new spring day, the first real escape from winter's clutches.

The Scona Lords Cross Country Team powered their way to the top yet again! After a gruelling season, the blood, sweat and tears (not to mention the occasional vomit) revealed the character of every Cross Country team member as being a true Scona Lord. The net result: 60 runners decisively captured Scona's 2lst consecutive city championship. In addition, 17 of our strongest athletes advanced to the provincials in Vilna where Scona triumphed once more, winning the 4A school championship. The efforts of our coaches, captains, and runners saw Scona work harder, cheer louder and run faster than any other team. The 1994 edition of Lords Cross Country exhibited unprecedented hard work, dedication and heart, combining to produce a season to remember. Congratulations Lords, and keep the tradition alive!

Scona has rarely ever had such a good year for basketball, but with the next few years in sight, it's only going to be getting better. The Senior Boys' team finished the year with an impressive 24-11 record, proving them to be a force to be reckoned with. More impressive will be next year's team, as 11 of the current 12 players will be going into grade 12. Can you say improvement? The Senior Girls' team should be enjoying the same success in the future as the guys. Six players from this year's teamare in grade 10, giving them ample room to excel. Perhaps more than any other team in the entire city, our Senior Girls are the most likely team to improve. Both of the junior teams can look back on a good year, and look forward to an even better one!

Volleyball

The Junior Boys Volleyball team went into the season as the defending City Champions. They went through the regular season undefeated, but lost a heartbreaking game to Harry Ainlay in the City semi-finals. Overall, the team did well this year winning two Gold medals and one silver medal in their tournament play. Well Done guys!

The two girls teams had a very good season too. While they were unable to win the provincial title as the Senior boys' team did, they played hard none the less, and had a rewarding year. Many of the members of the Junior team look forward to a place on next year's senior team, and many of the Seniors will be looking back upon this year with fond memories.

Senior Boys Volleyball

This year, the Senior Boys Volleyball team not only kept up it's traditional high performance, but made history with their first ever victory in the 4A Boys Provincial Championship. Though this was one of the major accomplishments of the team, they also continued their dominance of western Canada through several other big wins. The team took their third straight U of A title, second straight UBC title, seventh straight K.L.O (Kelowna) tournament title, and the U of C championship. Of course their accomplishments also included yet another city championship.

The team benefitted from the strong leadership of Ryan Oswald, Grayson Weir and Warren Henschel who were all captains of this year's team. Every team member played a big role in the team's many successes this year, and they all owe it to Coach Kirkland's outstanding leadership, guidance and friendship. Without him the season just wouldn't have been the same.

Football

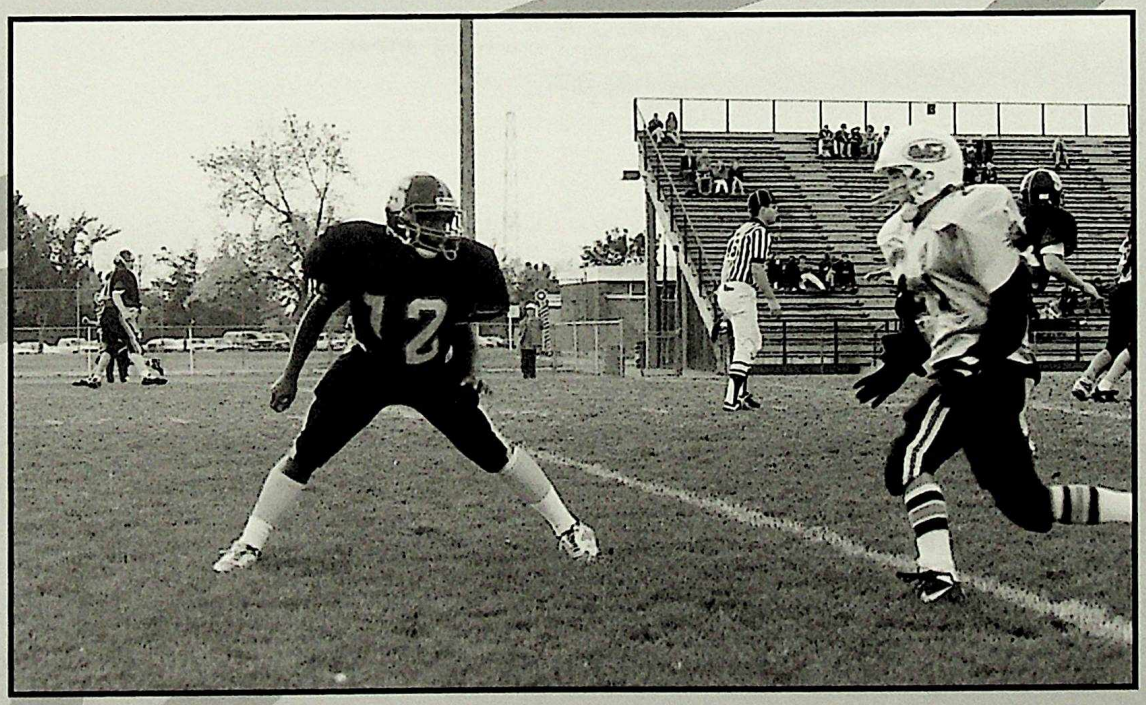
This year, the SCONA Lord's senior football program, under the guidance and direction of coaches Drever, Harker, Gerba, and Bailey was rewarded for the countless hours of practice and hard work that were put in by players and coaches alike with 25-1 1 and 18-6 victories over Queen Elizabeth and Ross Sheppard respectively. Captain Rory Oliver, summed up the season as "disappointing," and added that "it can only get better." What wasn't a disappointment, however, was the amount of enthusiasm and dedication displayed not only by the team, but also by the many parents and students that came out to cheer us on, and who helped make those two wins possible. The team's offence came together and showed flashes of what is to come several times throughout the season. The defence, at times, made playing the SCONA Lords an experience to be likened to playing in the House of Pain. Because of outstanding up-and coming talent waiting in the wings, specifically the SCONA Lords Junior Football team, the future looks bright for the football program. This year's success is only a taste of what is to come for the football program that refused to die.

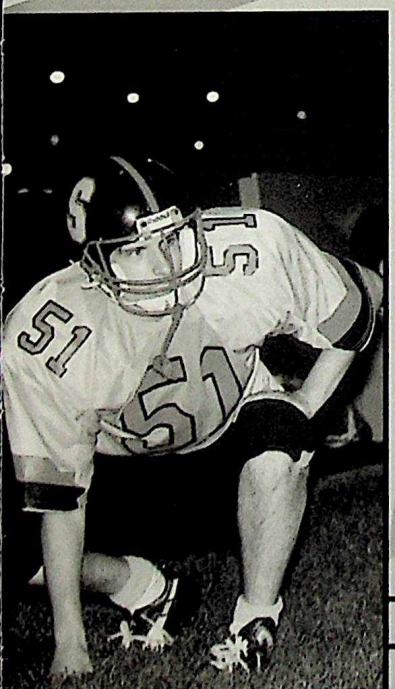
Forward! Yes! Forward! Yes! To Victory! SCONA!

-Bernard Sowa

A sport like football can be both physically and mentally demanding. Brian Spronk stays focused.

Tension mounts for the Senior Boys team as a line prepares for action.





Tim Mottershead gets help off the field from Coach Drever and the M.E. Lazerte trainer.

Jeff Marceelus and Darryl Jodoin wait between plays.

Ready to act in a split second, Bernard Sowa keeps an eye on an M.E. LaZerte receiver.

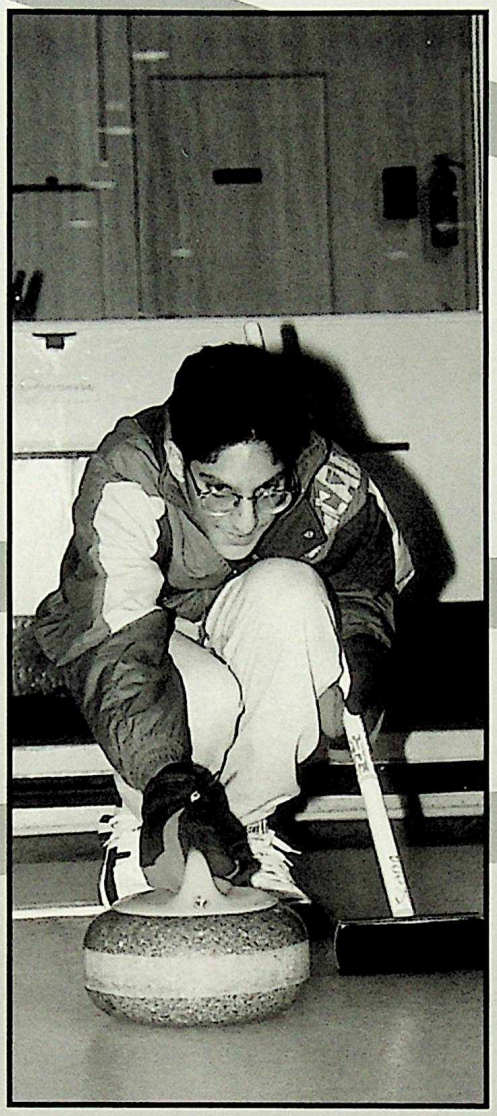
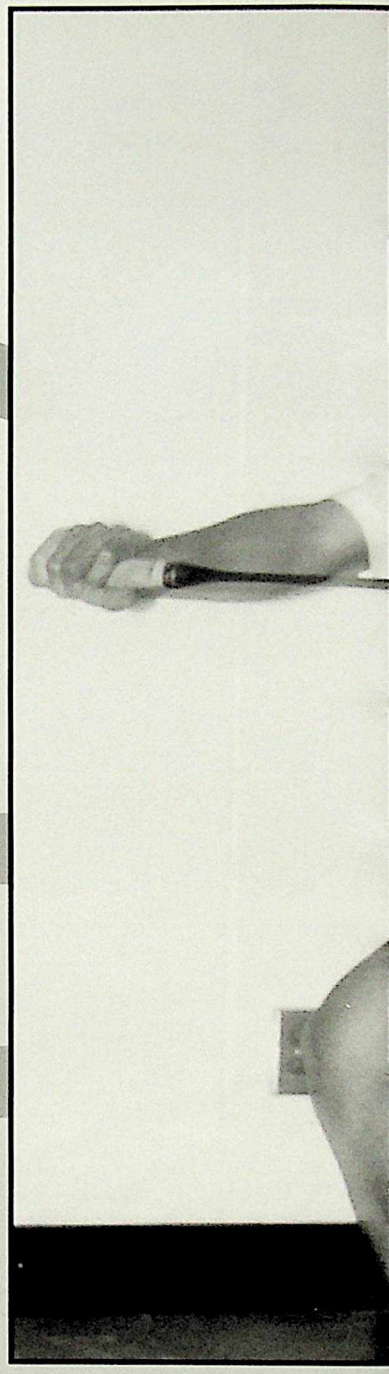
Jamie Chan moves quickly to intercept yet another incoming badminton birdie.

Eyes focused on the target, Faisal Karmali sends a rock spinning towards its destination.

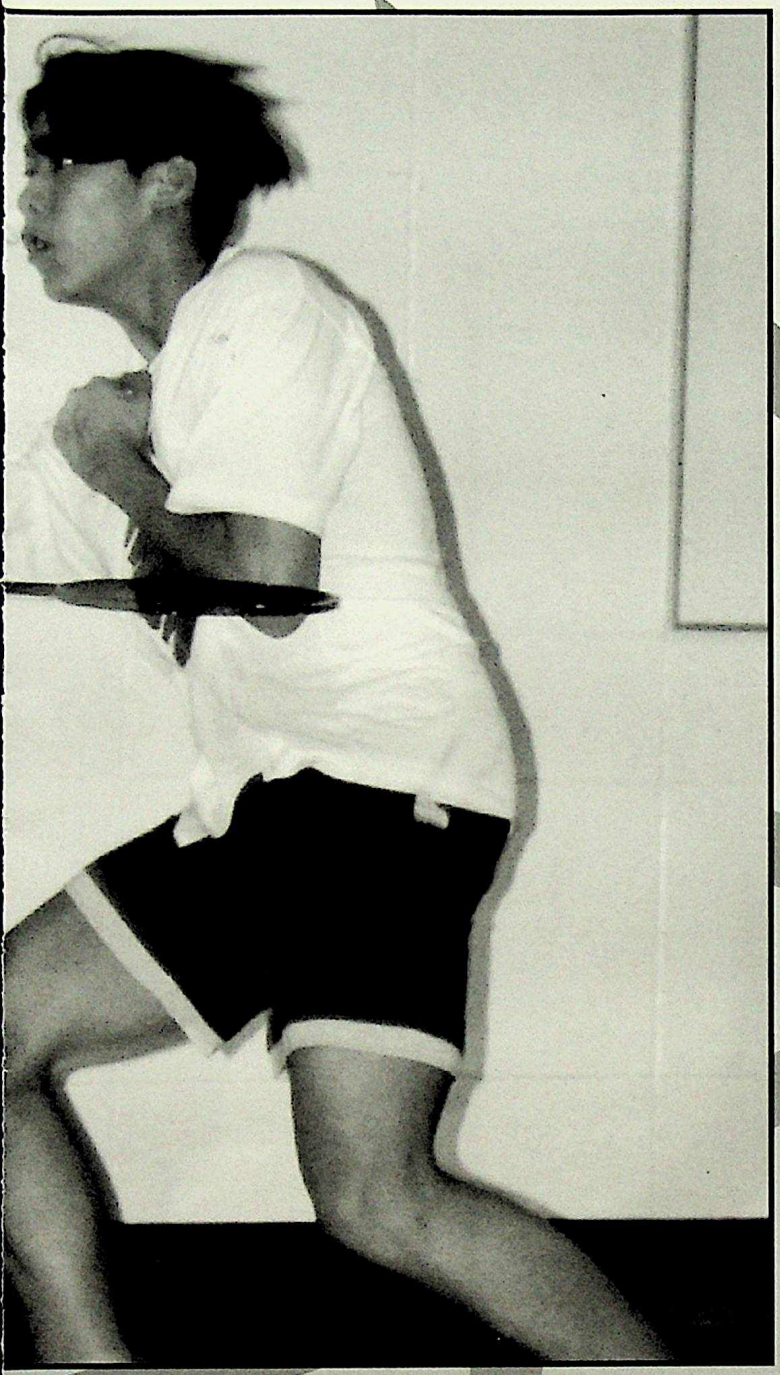




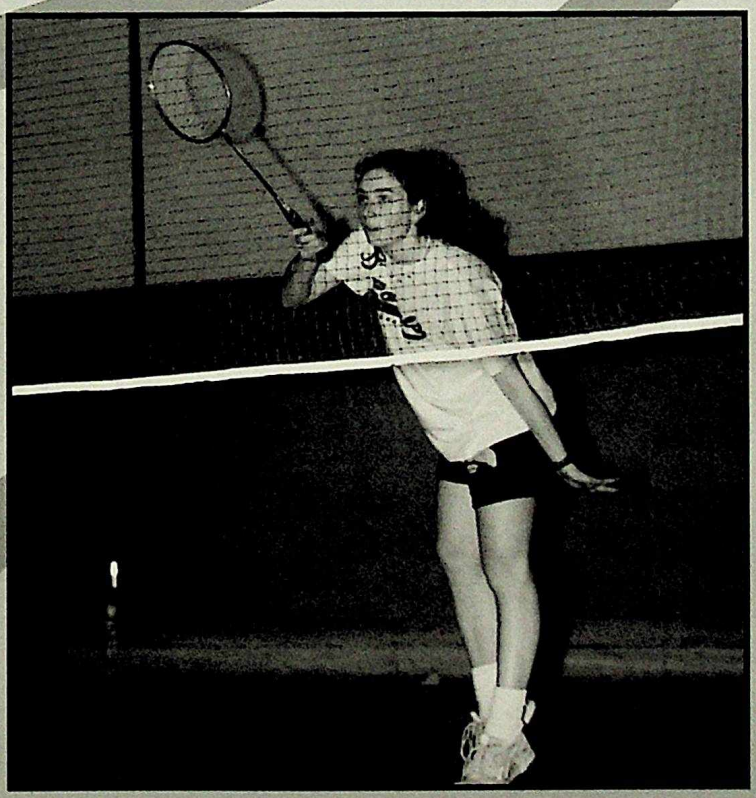
Badminton and Curling Teams

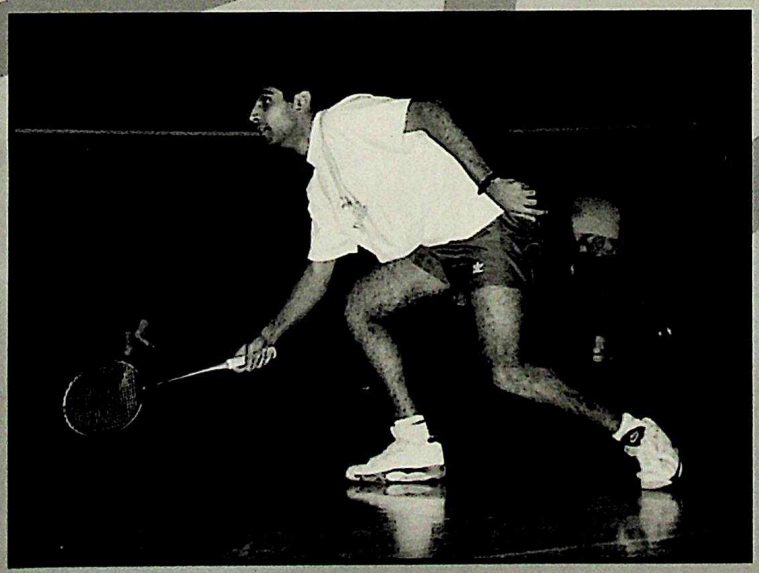
Badminton tryouts were a popular place to be this year, as there was a near record turnout of people wanting a place on the team. Despite everyone's aspirations, only a few talented people were chosen for the team. Everyone showed a great deal of dedication towards the team, and with good results. The Scona badminton team captured the silver medal in the City Championships!

This year has also been very successful for Scona's curling team! There were enough people involved to form a Senior Girls team, A mixed team, and a Junior Boys team. The hard work that everyone put in this year was evident in the results - the Junior Boys made it to semifinal action, the Senior Girls took first place in their competition, and the mixed team was the consolation round winner. All things considered, this was an excellent season. Hopefully next year will be just as fun.



Melissa Destefanis teeters precariously as she prepares to return a serve.





Annette Stupar, Wendy Hum and Janet Melnyk all work furiously to guide an incoming rock.

Veer Gidwaney reaches low to volley a birdie back across the net.

SWIMMING

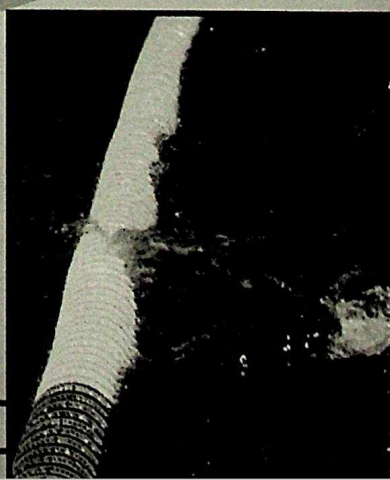
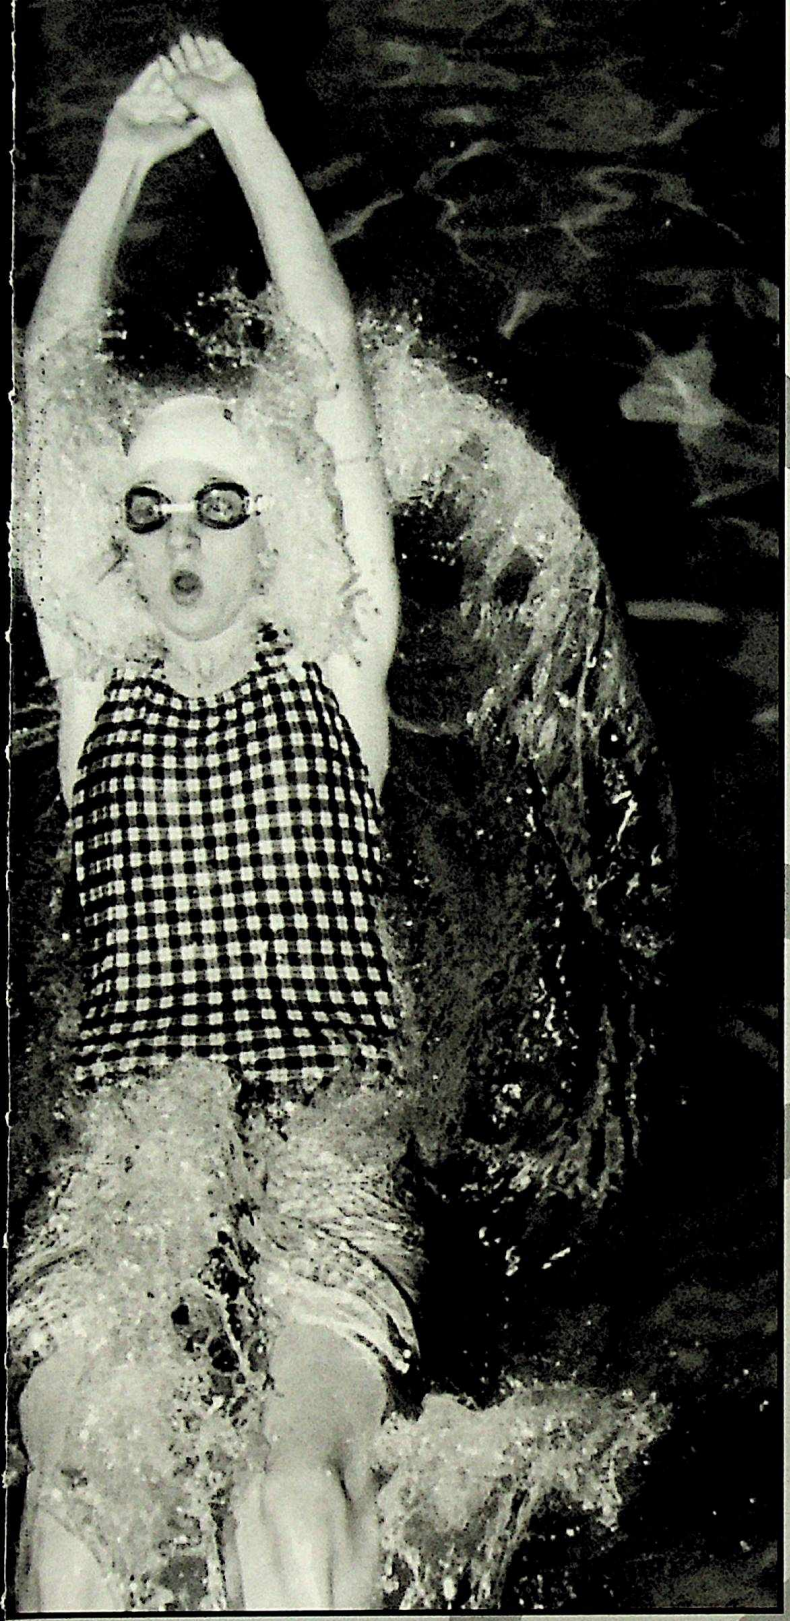
Where would the swimmers be without the support of their fellow atheletes? Christina Bruns, Kristin Kaasa and Rushmi Saxena cheer on the Lords.

Kick-pull-breathe-kick-kick-pull...This Scona Lord has the procedure down pat.





Swimming Lords

The Scona swim team ruled the pool in 1995! A large school of Scona swimmers swam harder, held their breath longer, and finished faster than the competition, earning their ninth consecutive city swim championship. It was close this time around, but Scona's pride and commitment to maintain the tradition never faltered as the Lords cheered unlike ever before right up to the oh so sweet end. Every swimmer can claim that the hours of grueling workouts under the waters of the Kinsmen and Scona pools paid off when it counted most. Special thanks to the team of coaches who put up with countless late excuses (ANOTHER flat tire?), complaints (the water is just too darn COLD!) and whines (Another 5000m continuous BUTTERFLY?!). You made it all possible. Good luck to next year's team as they shoot for the decade!

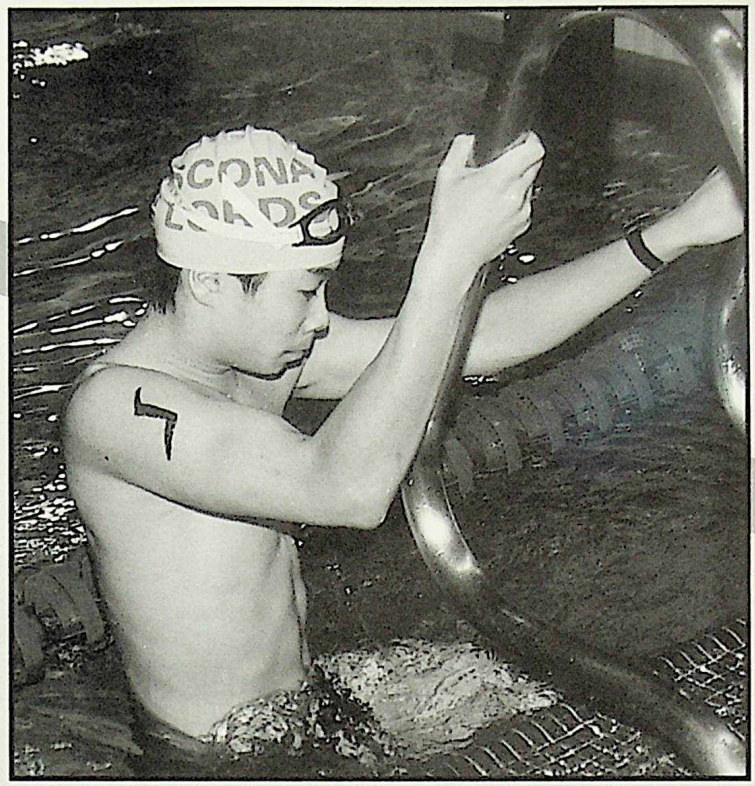
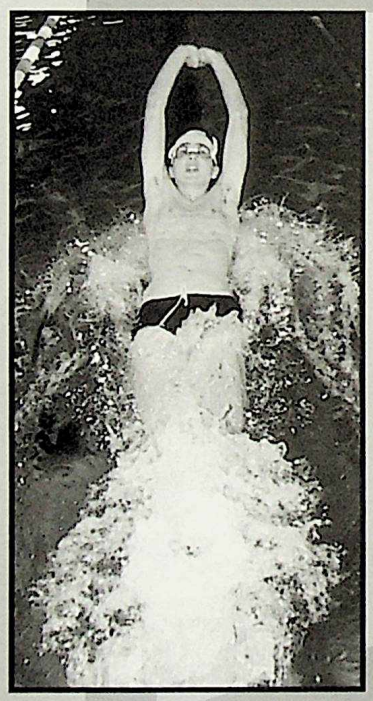
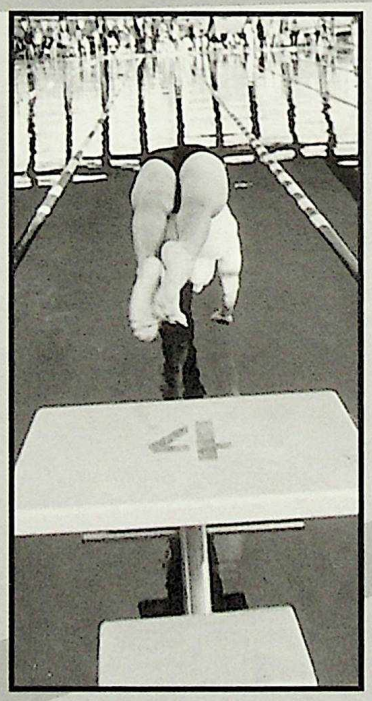
Ready, set, GO! Shelly Lidkea assumes the set position just prior to her start.

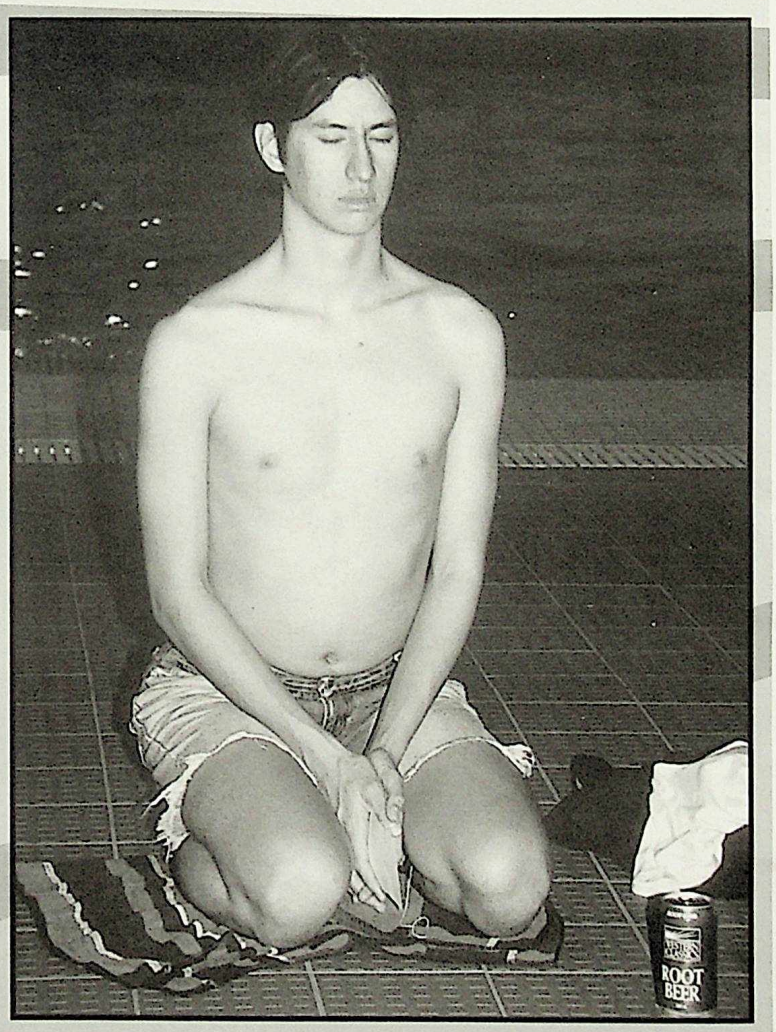
As this swimmer knows, it can be hard dragging your body out of the water after a race.







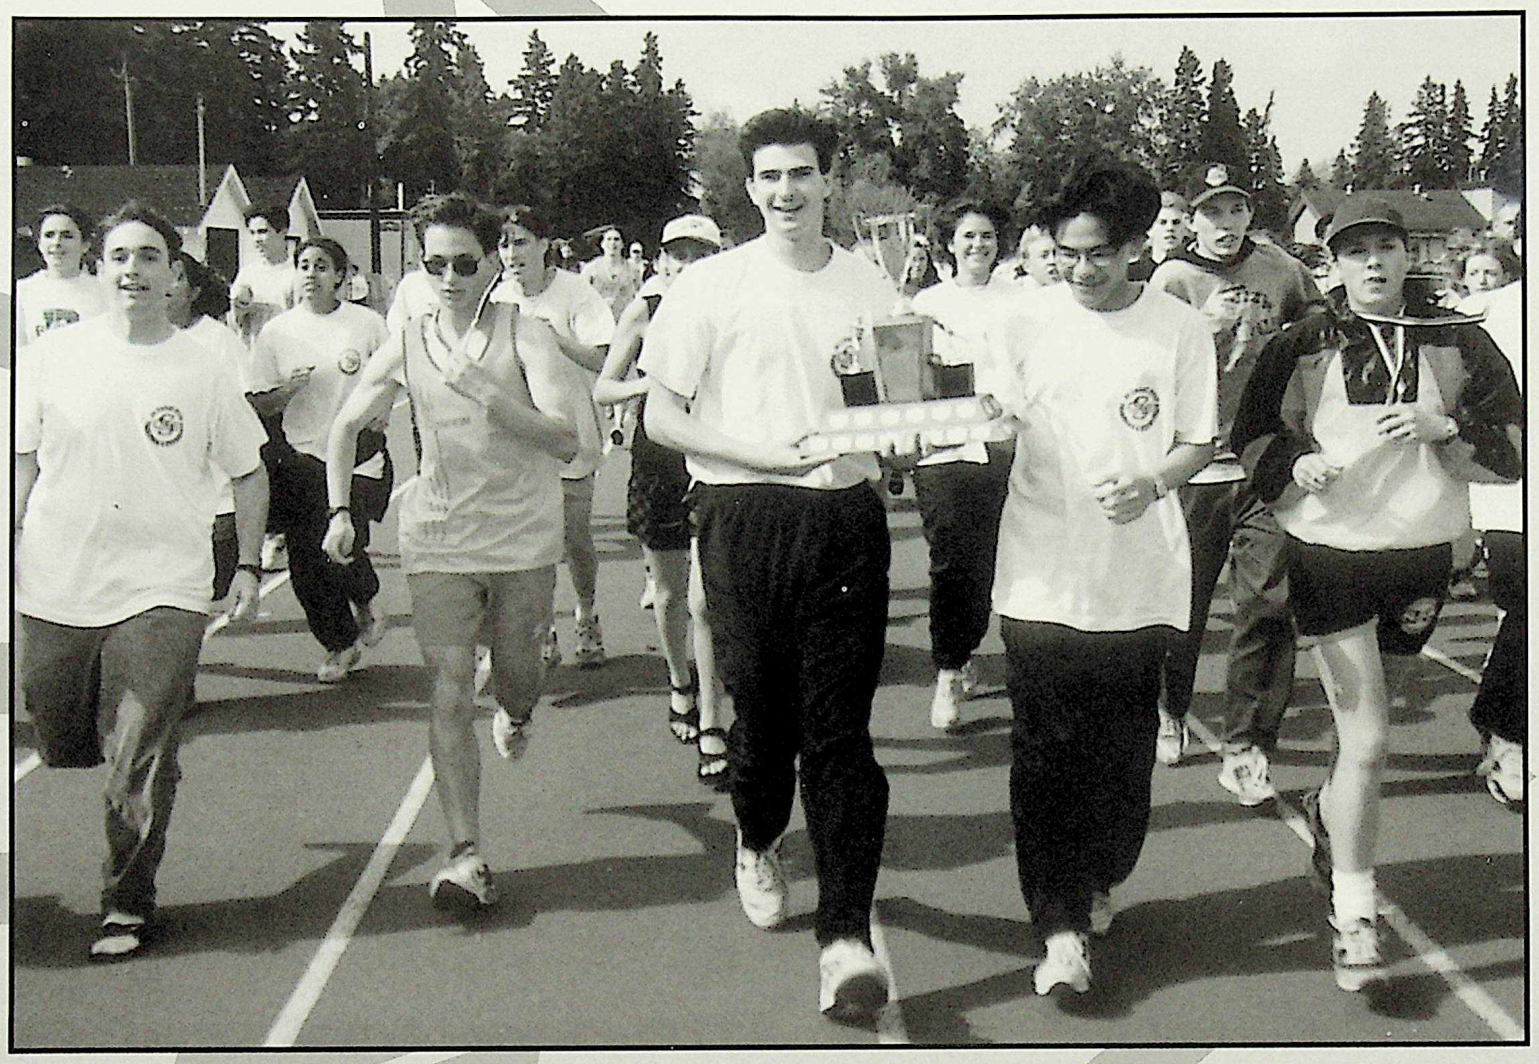
Yet another fine example of a back start.

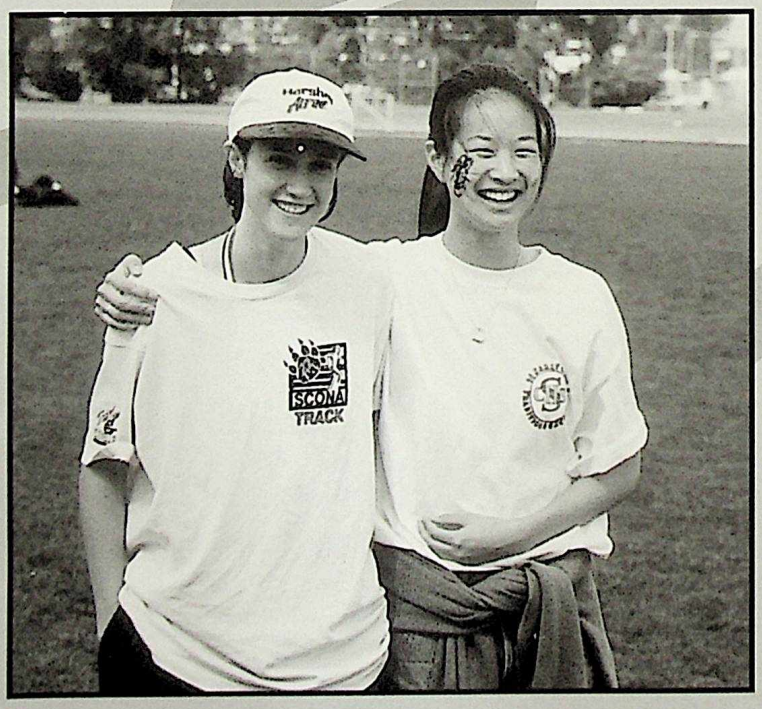


When the gun goes off, this is the first thing an opponent sees. A Scona Lord in the air.

Jon Sacharuk knows that the key to winning is in physical and mental training, and a good Root Beer.

City Champions Again!



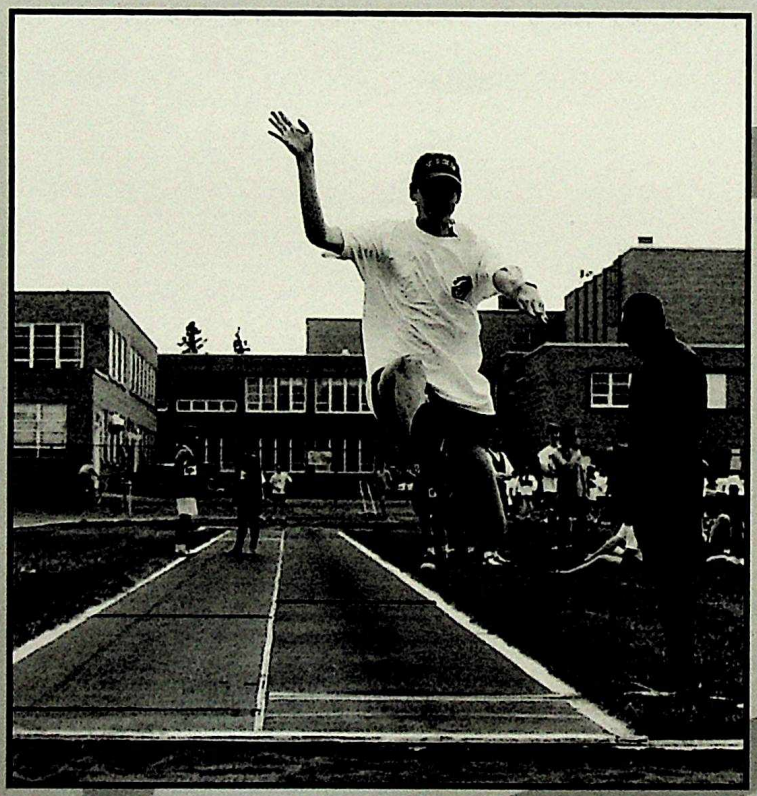


One away from 25, guys! The Scona track team finishes their victory lap all smiles, and why not? Setting world records has always been fun, and Scona has had more experience at it than just about anyone else.

A cheerful Michelle Knettig and an ecstatic Freda Lo show off their pride in Scona's track team.

Alta Nguyen's all alone in the air with no place to go but down. That's pole vaulting for you.

Aly Ismail prepares for take-off as he screams toward the pit in the senior boys triple jump.



Kacper Jaskowiak, airborne again. After all, that's what a long jumper does best.

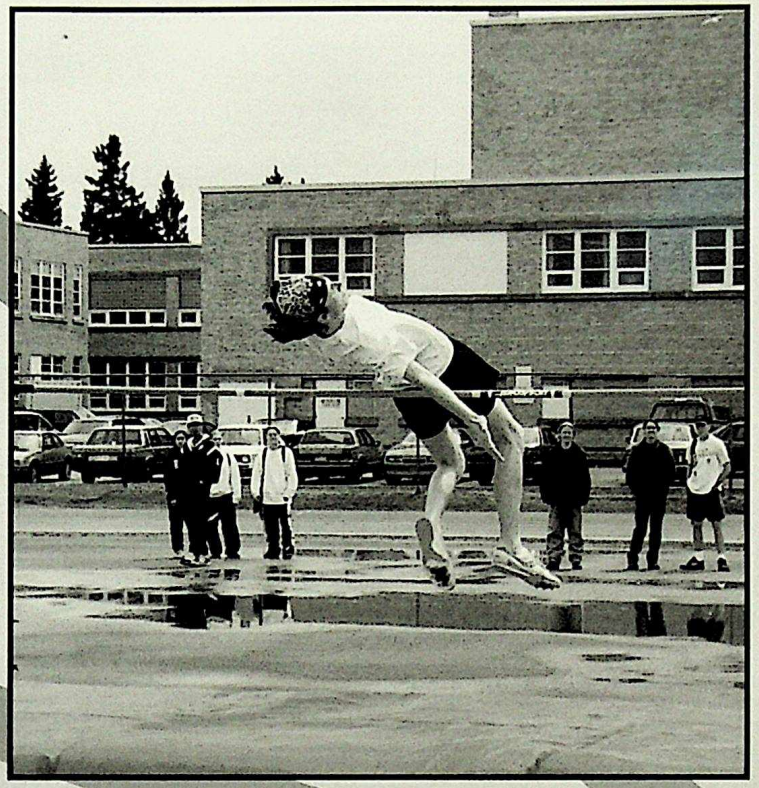
Rob Bowker arcs himself gracefully over the high jump bar.

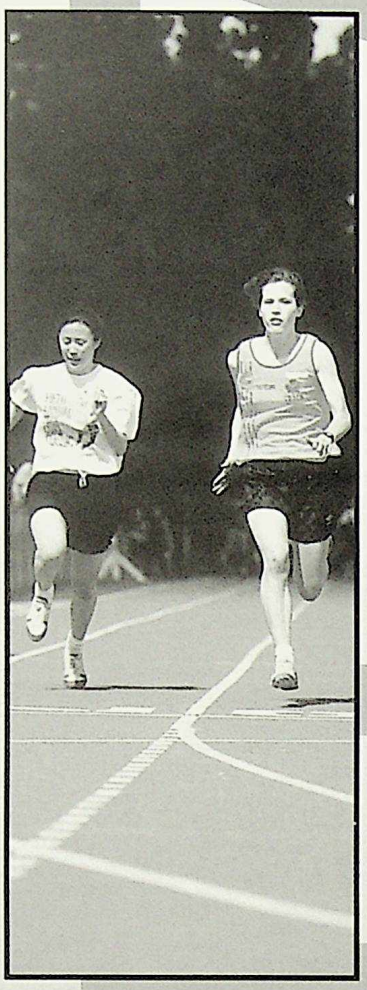


Number 24!

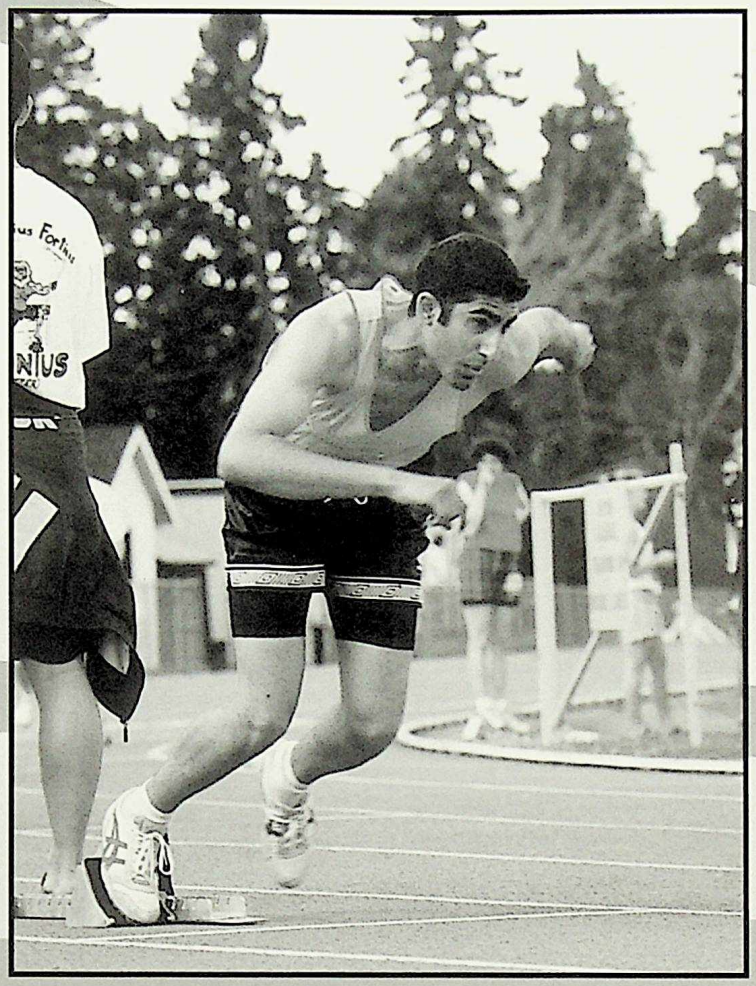
Scona Track and Field WINS #24! With its twenty fourth consecutive city track championship, Scona Track has reasserted the fact that it is the greatest athletic program on the planet. Scona's unprecedented continuing success can be attributed to the dedicated, hard working athletes who strived to go higher, farther, and faster than the competition. Weeks of pounding the rubber without relenting, working on that throwing form religiously, and stretching to leap that extra distance paid off in the end. For the record: there were 185 athletes, winning the divisional, city, and provincial track and field meets. Special thanks go out to our head coach, Ms. Love-Pankonin, and to the other teachers and alumni coaches who devoted so much to the athletes, making this win possible. Good luck to next year's Lords as Scona reaches for the quarter century mark!

Finding that familiar feeling of the Fallisbury flop is fine by this high jumper.

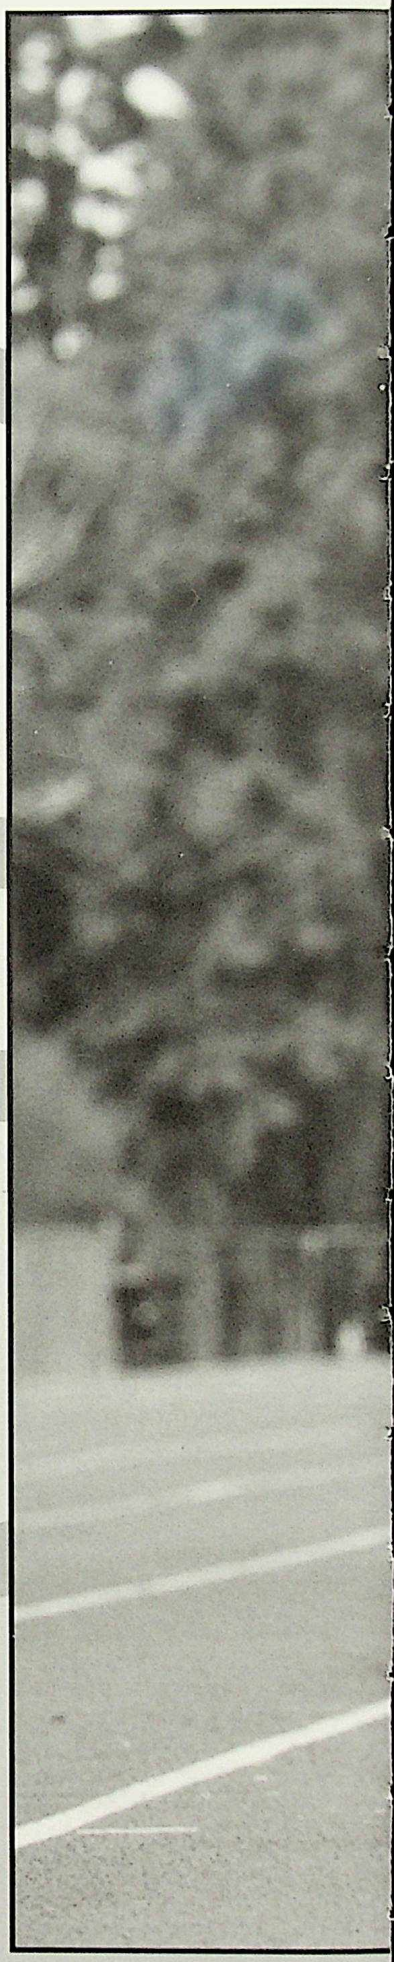
Annette Stupar takes those last few strides towards the finish line.

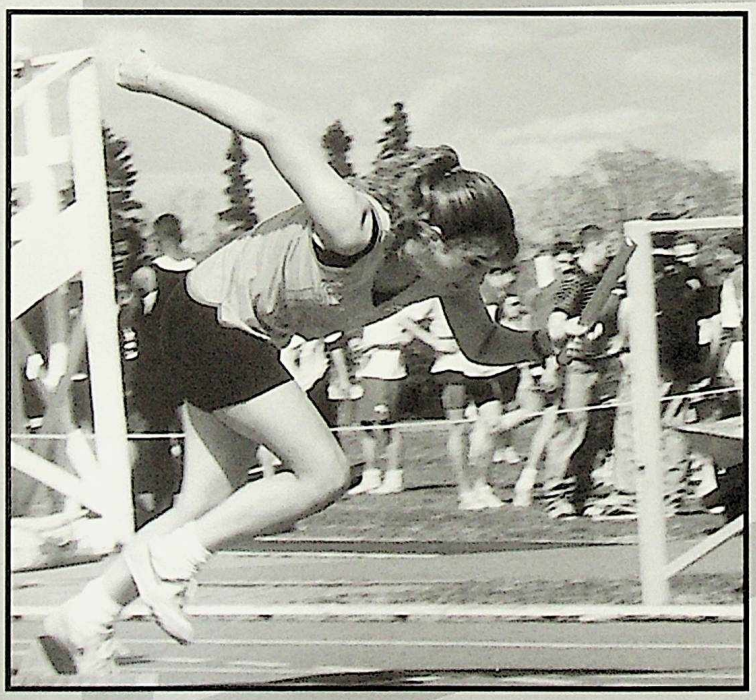


Out of the blocks quickly, Aly Ismail begins another 4x100m relay for Scona.

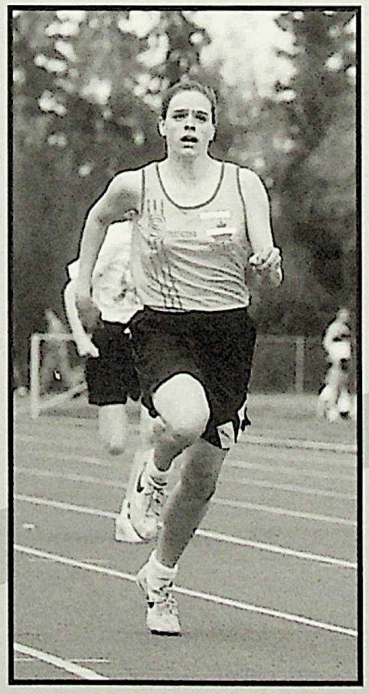


All alone in the lead, Lisa McIsaac takes her race easily.

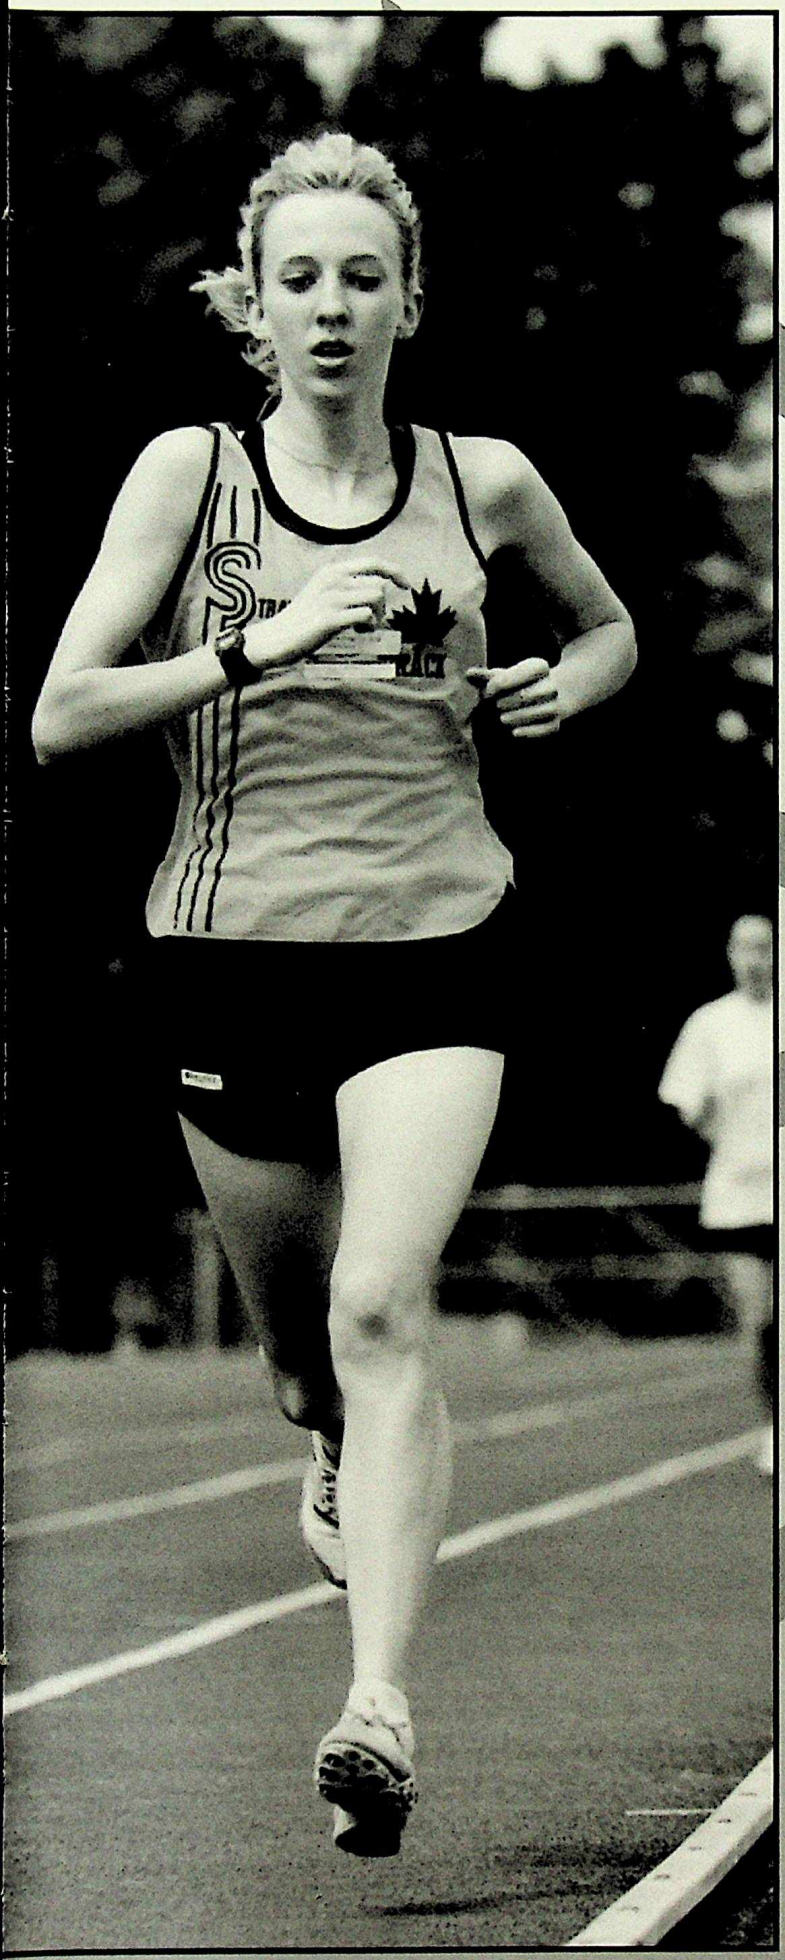




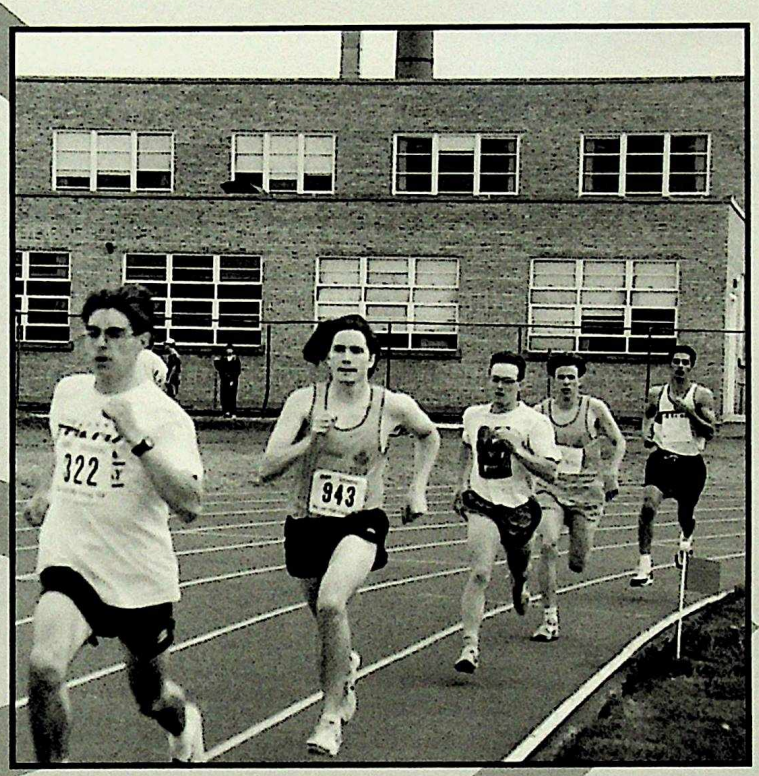
Of all sports at Scona, sprinting requires the fastest reactions. Katie Caswell demonstrates.



That look of pain on Alana Hudson's face means she's already put in 100%.



With both Sheamus Murphy and Steven Phillipson running, Scona is assured of a good finish.



Sharla McClymont races down the home stretch ahead of the other competitors in the 4x100m.

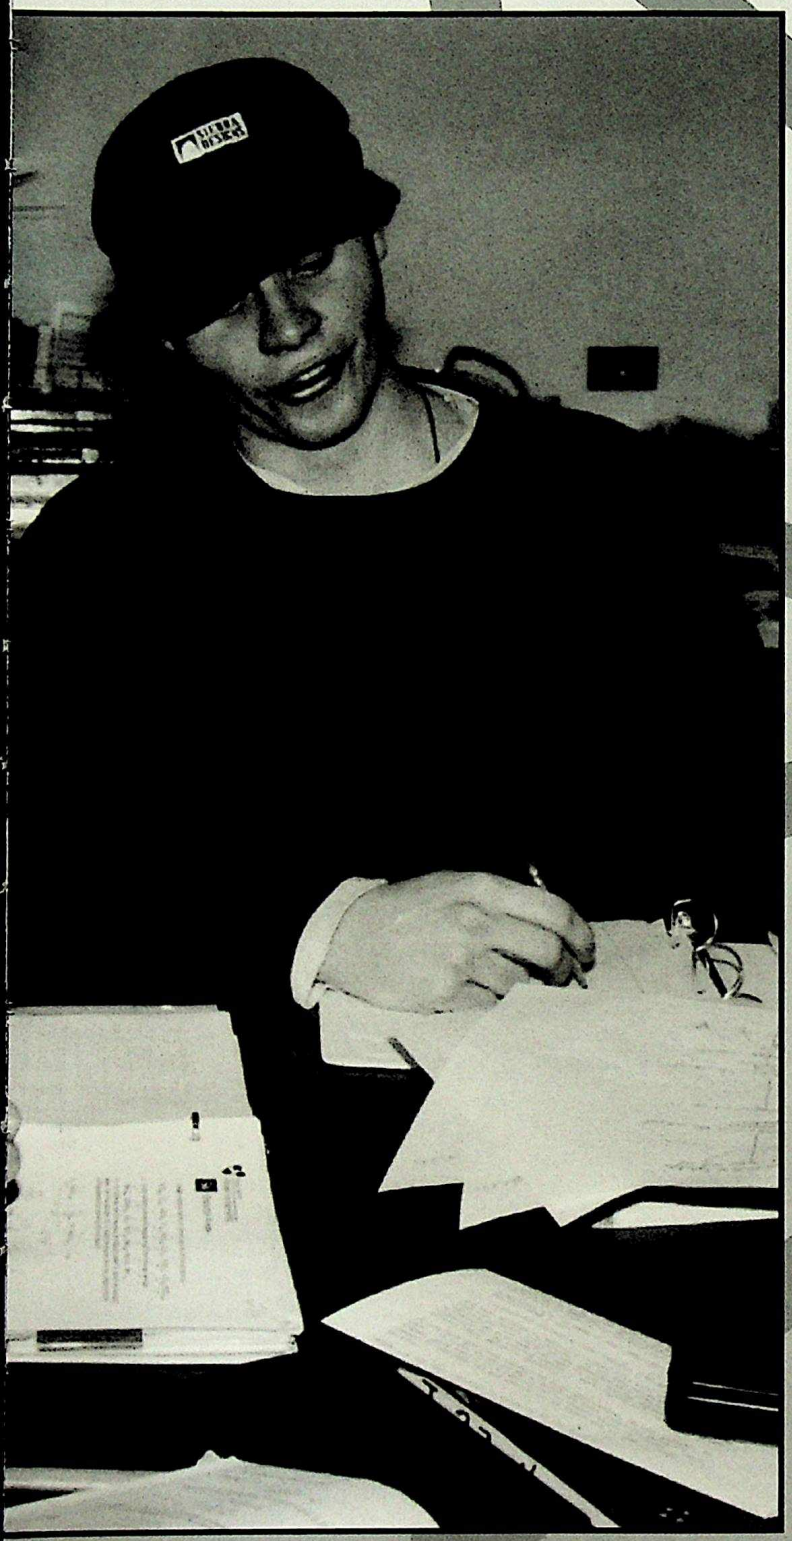
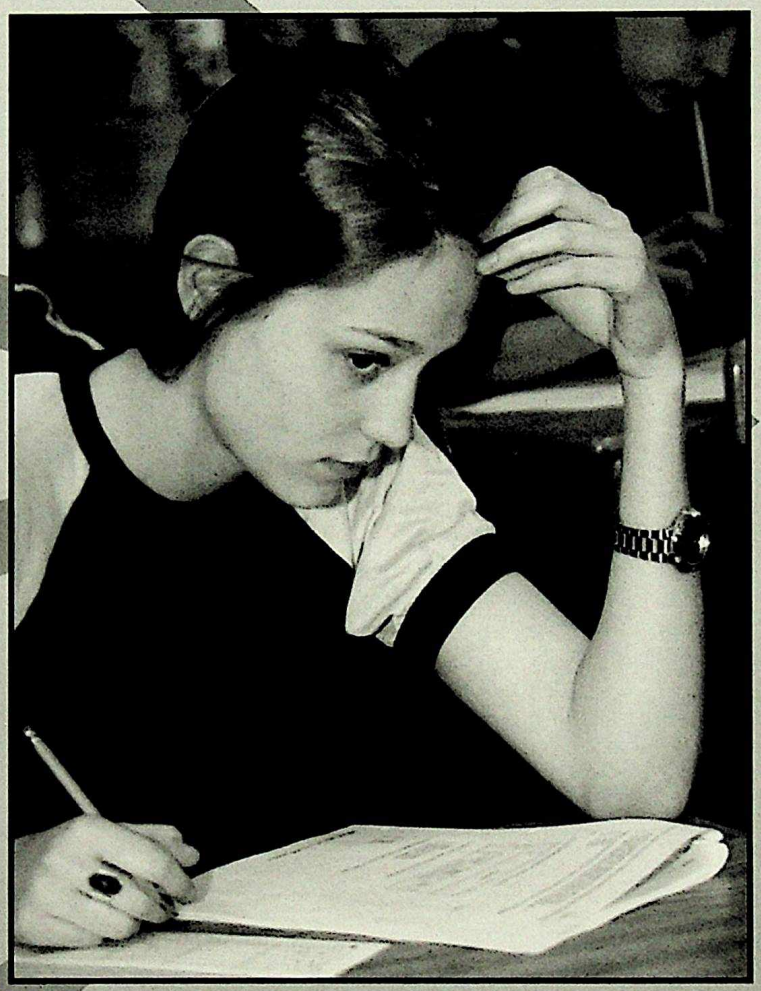
pectations





Xu Yao and Scott Riddell appear happy about something - how often does chemistry homework do this to you?

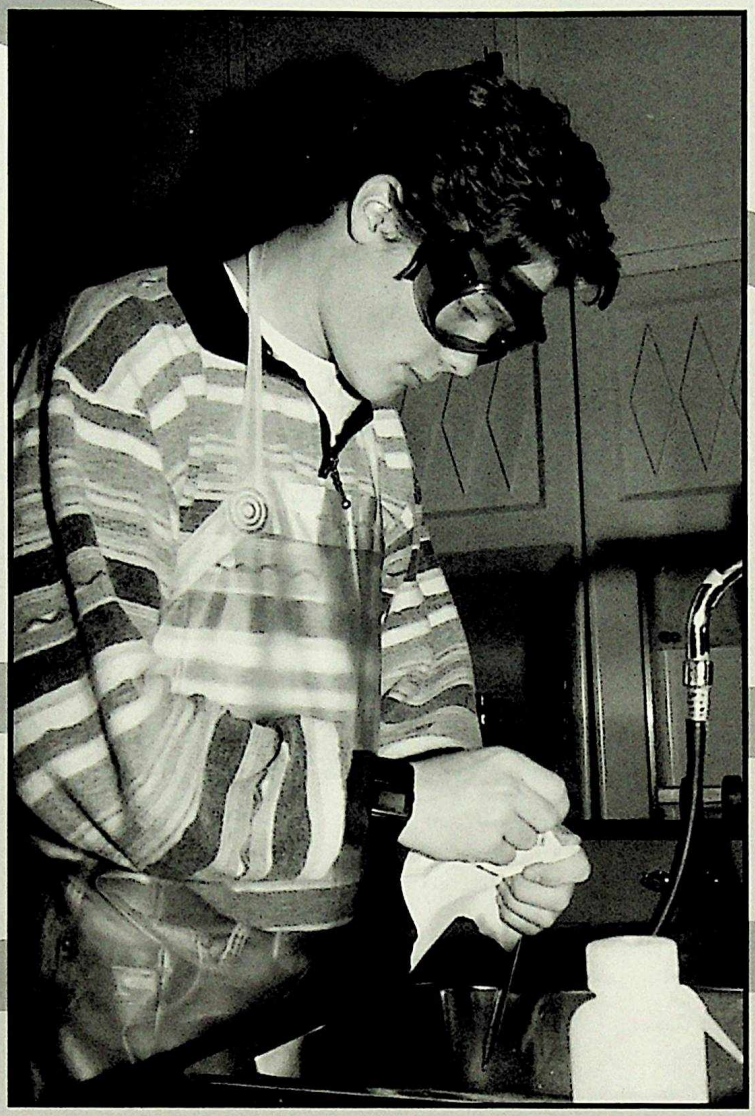
Erin Van Schaik contemplates a question on a very long social studies test.

Math and Sciences

Always thinking of safety first, James Milner wears the mandatory goggles and apron for a lab.

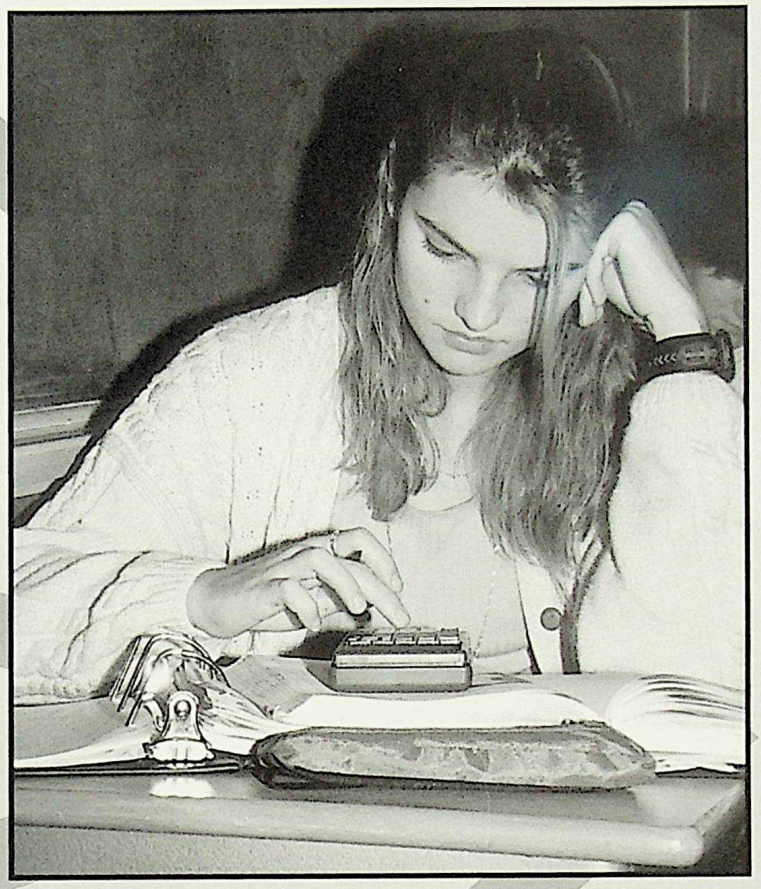
No high school program would be complete without a healthy selection of vegetables - like these found in physics classes. Exploding pumpkins and rutabagas colliding with 300 kilogram turnips are common.

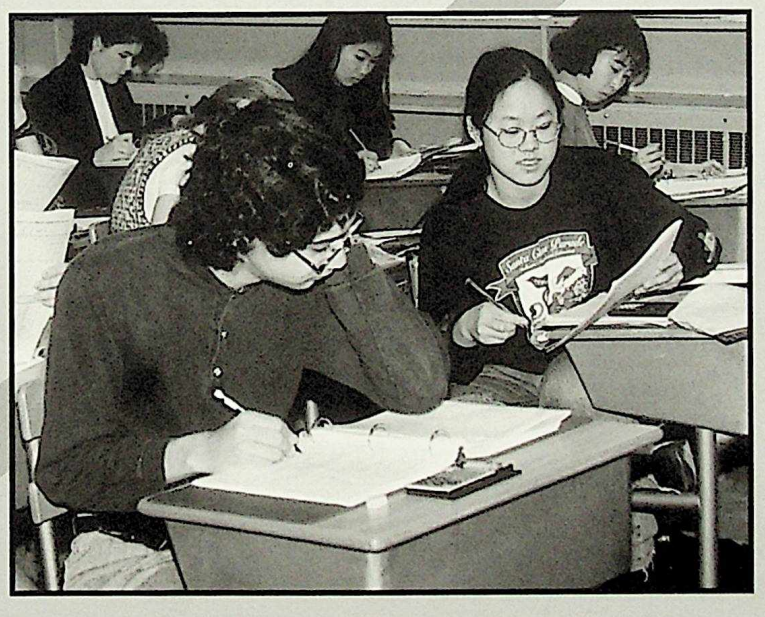
Don't forget to round out your schedule with potassium permanganate, peristalsis, and polynomial functions. In Chemistry, you learn 8 million ways of balancing the same equation. But when in the lab, don't forget to wear your goggles in case you spill water on your way from the carboy. In Biology, not only do you get the priviledge of dissecting a fetal pig but you also learn about the exciting sex life of plants. But don't forget Math, which will be exceeding useful when you have to use conics to figure out how much you owe in income tax. $c^2 = a^2 + b^2$. That's all you ever have to know.



Anyone who has taken Science 10 will remember that latex gloves are quite helpful here.

Math 30 is for Dana Pierce as it is for many others - a subject requiring concentration, patience and endurance.





Properly working a buret is one of the fundamental skills of Chemistry 30. Heather Thomas checks the valve during a lab.

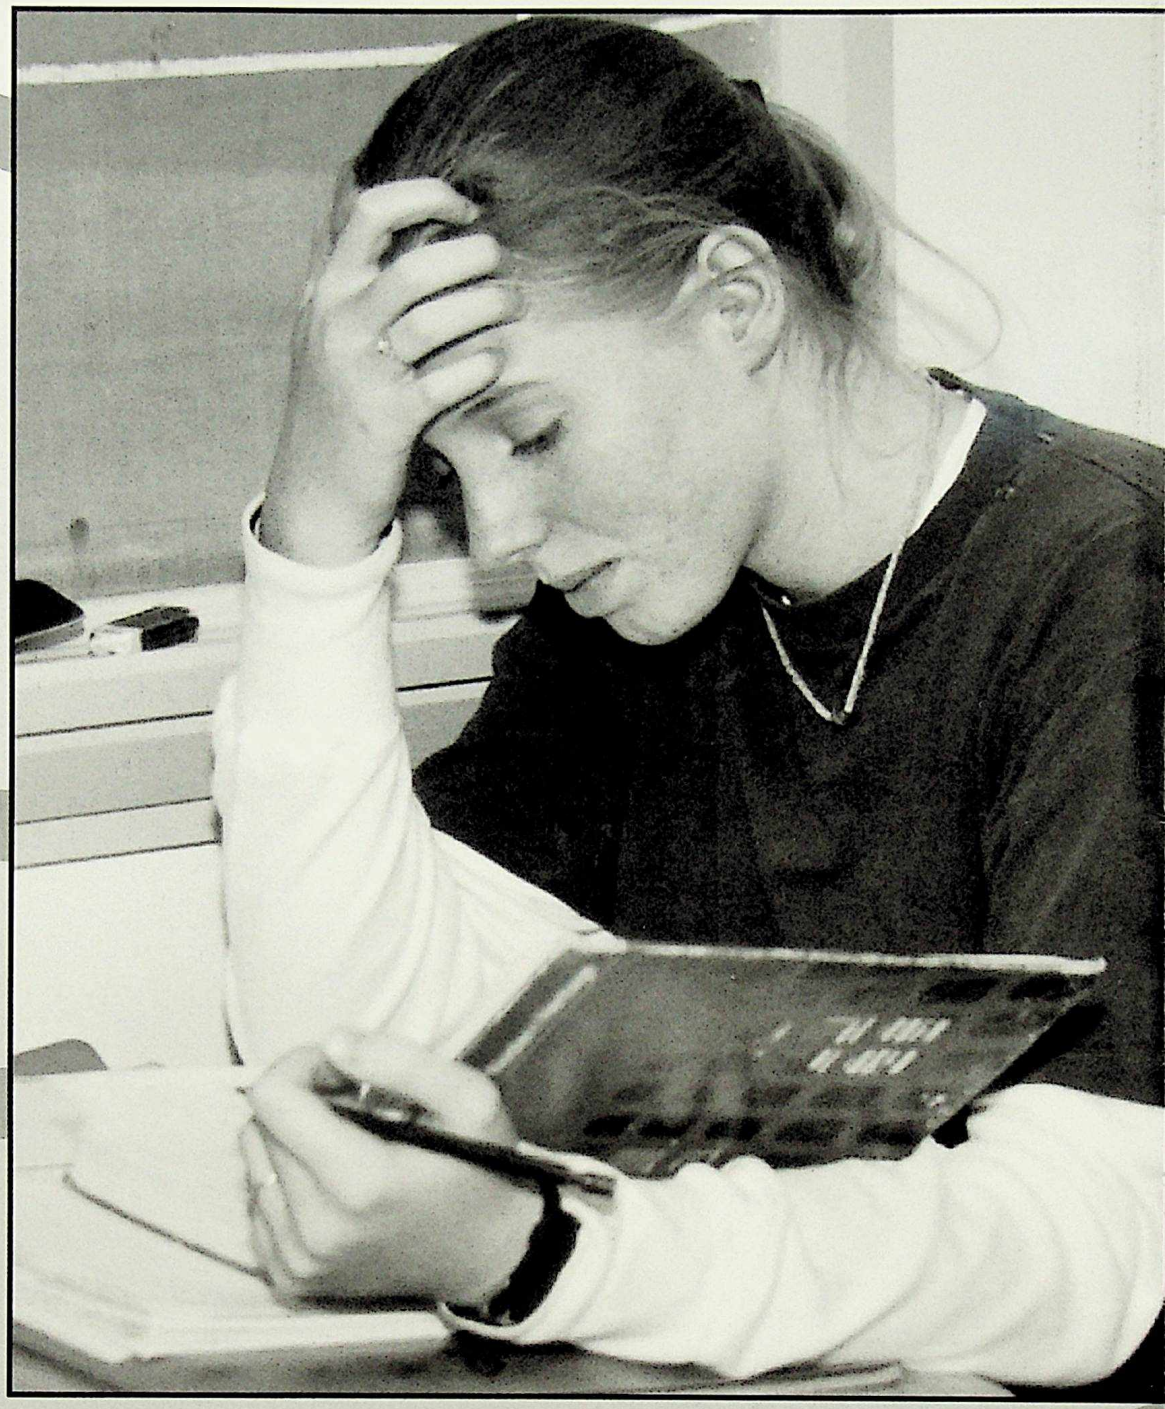
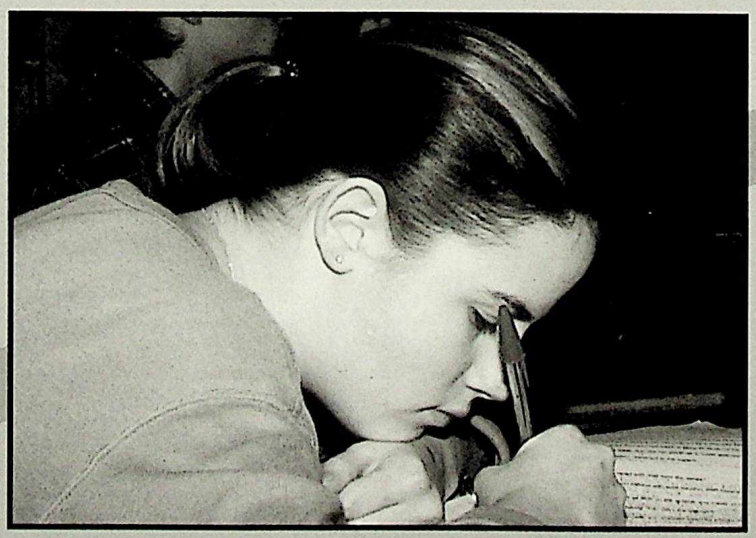
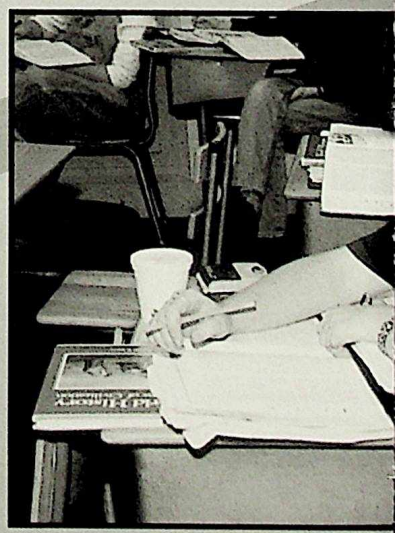
Alana Milne bears that tired expression that comes from reading chapter after chapter of a Social textbook.



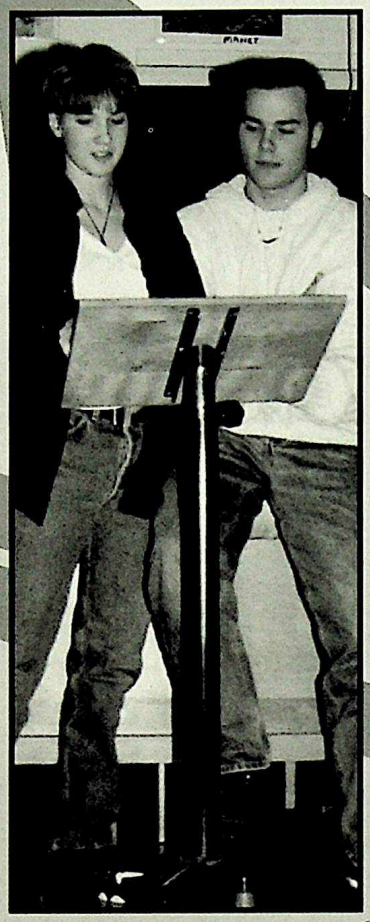
It wouldn't be English if you weren't forced to read the "classics". Kim McFarlane explains the meaning of The Great Gatsby.

Marla Kimball studiously works on her assignment - what a rare moment.





English and Social Studies



The best part of English? Listening to your teacher make math jokes. The worst part of English? Having your teacher conspire with your Social teacher to assign essays, which are due the same day. What do we learn from this? That after 3:00 am we can no longer make coherent sentences.

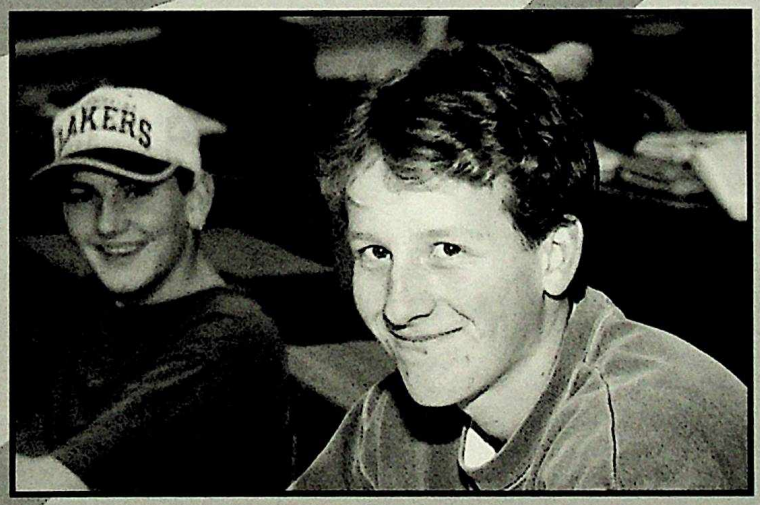
In English, we were exposed to the wonders of Shakespeare, or such classic literature as To Kill A Mockingbird, Lord Of The Flies, and 1984. We examined Inherit The Wind, A Streetcar Named Desire, and Death of a Salesman. You learn to write entire essays after reading just the first and last chapters. Then there are films - which would probably make more sense if we didn't keep on dozing off in the middle of them, but it's so tempting to just rest your head when you're sleepy and the room is dark and the TV drones on and on.....

Whoops! Nearly drifted off there. Then there's Social, where we were thrilled to death to learn all the Canadian history there is to know in Social 10, and once we've exhausted that we get to move on to European history in Social 20. Then with Social 30 comes Death and Depression - modern history since 1919.

However, in between slow parts there are lively and stimulating class discussions, sometimes having no relation to the course whatsoever. Of all the classes that we take in our high school lives, English and Social best teach us how to think, a skill we will probably all be needing when we reach 'The Real World'.

Class presentations have always been a part of English. Amy Anderson and Ryan Oswald enlighten their peers.

Crystal Drew works in front of a backdrop of newspapers - what could be more appropriate for english?



If you don't know an answer, smile and the teacher won't be able to tell. Bill van Egteren demonstrates.

Amanda Swanek is looking somewhat perplexed by the complexities of Social 20.

Art, Home Ec. and I.A.

After too many hours of reading textbooks, practicing pronunciation and punching numbers into a calculator, every student needs a break.

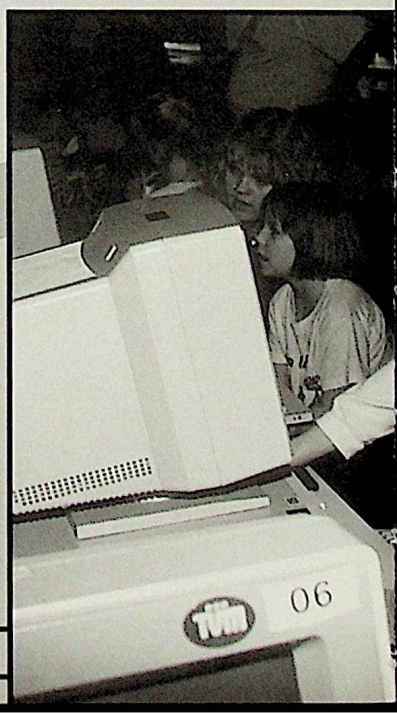
In I.A., one can learn how to make the perfect shelf while making a fashion statement by wearing those nifty safety goggles (don't we all love them?). Or you can don aprons in Home Ec., and learn how to prepare meals and boil water (yes, there are still people who don't know how). You can explore the depths of your imagination in Art by studying and applying techniques, while critiquing your own work as well as the work of others. And occasionally participate in the rare paint fight.

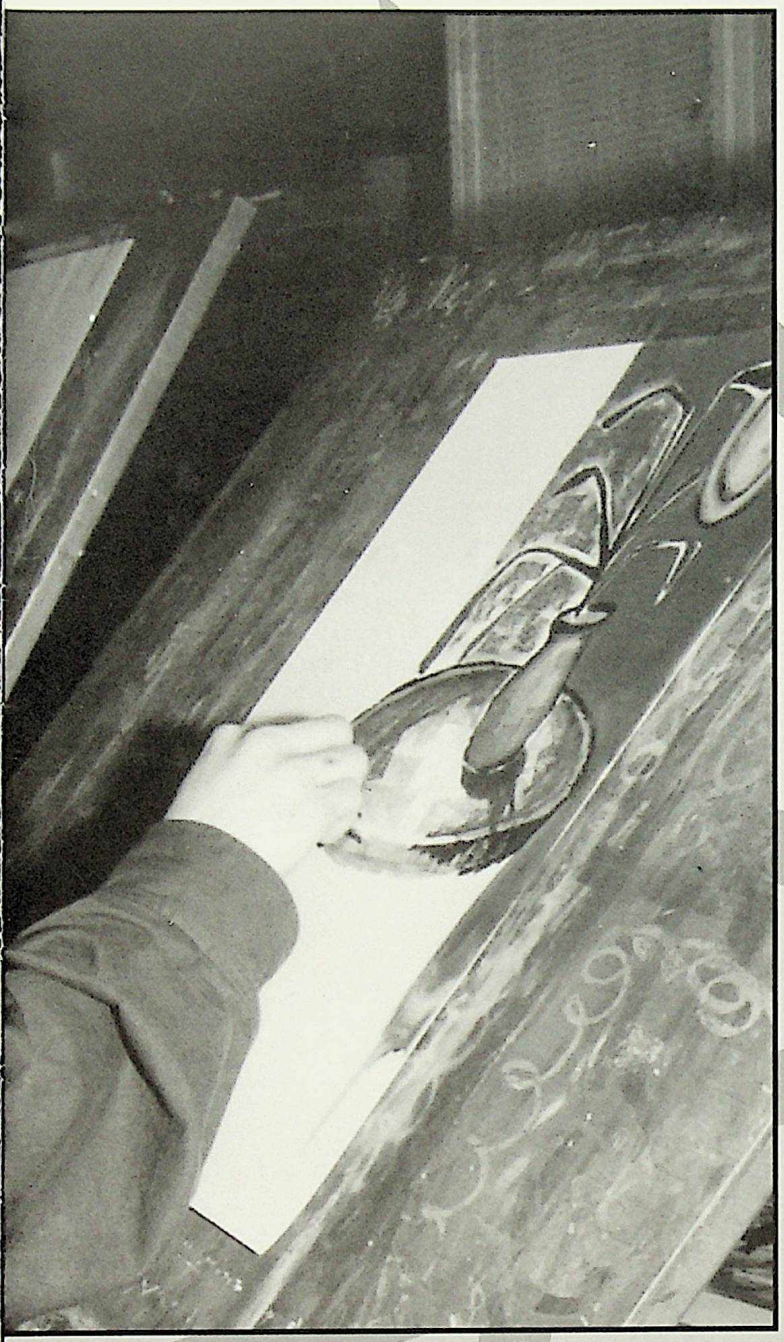
Why not prepare yourself for the business world in classes such as Accounting, Computer Processing, and Typewriting. If you know where the on switch is on a computer, you can zoom along on the information highway, while the rest of the world putts around in circles still employing the time old method of two-finger typing (hey, don't laugh).

No matter which class you choose, there is always an escape from tedium.

Rita Sheena looks forward the chance to enjoy her work - one of Home Ec's benefits.

Wearing a walkman lets those creative juices flow, just like in Nathan Birch.





Art history is a major part of Art 30. Shun Kamatsu here works on a piece imitating fauvist work.

The Home Economics department worked on this gingerbread replica of Scona for Christmas.

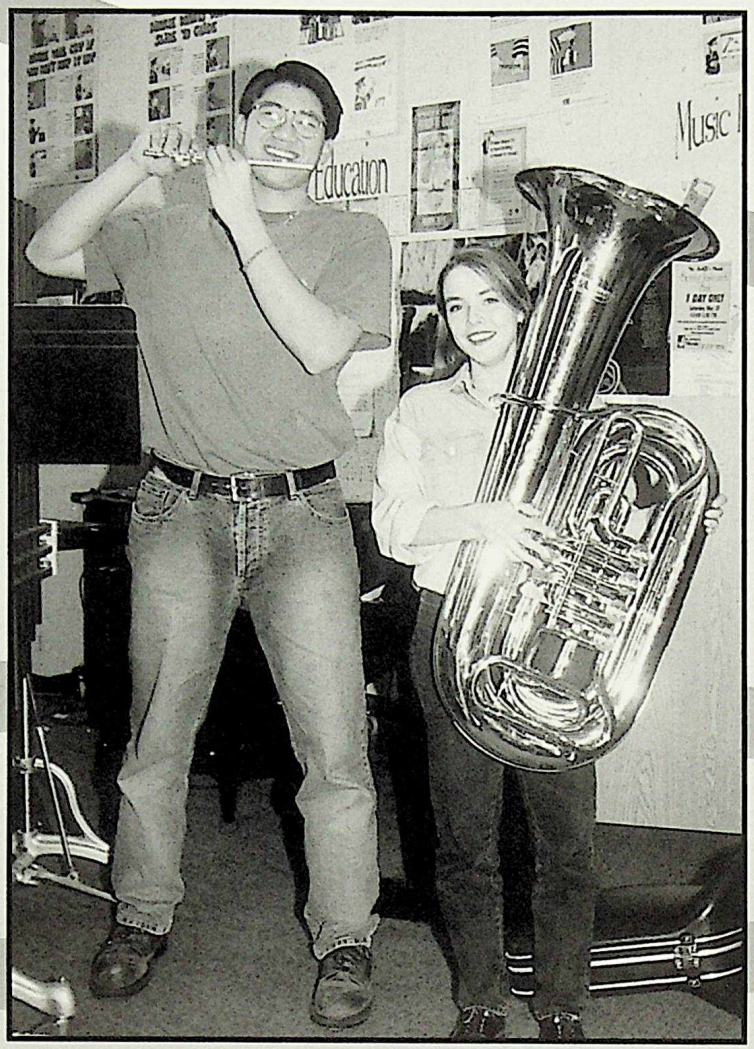
Business Education students like Harley Desprey hosted a field trip for nearby elementary kids.

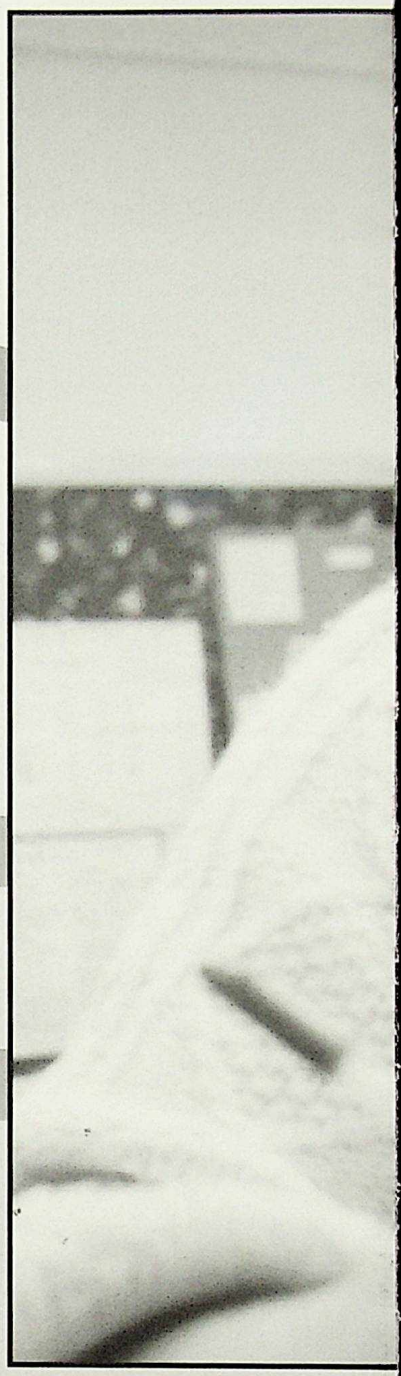
Rafal Kwasniewski and Sonya Sauders found out quickly the effect that cutting onions has on the eyes.

Contrast? Musical instruments vary just as much as Erin Bischof and Kevin Leung do.

Like Maureen Spivak, most people aren't fluent in two languages. That's why we take French class.

Grade 10 is not the first year these students have acted, by this point they are already quite experienced.





Drama, Music, Languages and C.A.L.M.

For those students who wish to receive their high school diploma, CALM 20 is a necessity. Although many students can be heard complaining about this course, it is (despite what the sceptics say) useful. In the "Moving Out" project, students learn how to balance a budget and live on macaroni and cheese for two weeks (who said it was impossible). In this course, you also learn about STDs in the "Sex Ed." unit and in the "Careers" unit, you learn that a "culinary supervisor of potato dishes" actually means "you make french fries at McD's". See, CALM is useful.

For those of you who wish to expand your vocabulary, taking a second or even third language is very useful and interesting. You can talk to the new (and cute) exchange student in their own native language. Or you can persuade you parents to let you travel around the world since you now know how to communicate with foreigners. You can also learn valuable phrases in French, German, Latin, or Spanish, to use when on vacation, such as "How much is that?", "Can I get it cheaper?", or "Where is the washroom?"

Two other courses which help to enrich and expand the minds of students are Drama, and Music. This year, Strathcona did exceptionally well, yet again, at the Kiwanis Festival, receiving numerous awards. Students in Music learned the fundamentals of music such as scales, as well as the music of Mozart and Bach, and perhaps a little Nirvana and Van Halen, on the side. The highlight of the year for Drama students, was the wonderful performance of Tom Jones. In Drama, students learn character development, improvisation, and play writing. Learning how to cry on the spot can also be useful in other classes when pleading for a better grade.

German class is an easy course if you already know the language like Marcus Kurschner does.

Didn't your mother warn you about putting your lips to metal in winter? Despite the cold air, Ryan McGregor and other members of the brass section continue in their performance.

This yearbook has been a terrific (or at times terrifying) experience for me, and I'm sure for others involved in making it. I've never felt quite the same way as when I see an ordinary student with talent and potential become a skilled yearbook worker. The same goes for when I look over the proofs for the book, and realize just how much help I've been given. I know that I could never have done this without Eric, Gladys or Marika, and so I owe you all more thanks than I've ever shown. Thanks also to Adrianna, Nancy, Magda, Beayue, Jackie, Leah and especially Wendy. To Mr. Woodrow, Mr. Gerun and Mrs. Rutland: you've found and corrected my mistakes so often that sometimes I don't think anything could get by you. I should also give a sincere thanks to Michelle and Jenifer, without whom I wouldn't have learned a thing about this job.

It's been great fun seeing the yearbook progress over the last three years. With everyone's help, its come far beyond what we ever expected at first. As new technology plays a role in the production of this book, I only hope that we won't become too concerned with how we make the yearbook, but with what goes into it.

1995 Student's Union

1994/95 was a year of firsts for the Students' Union Executive. It was the first year S.U. worked with a smaller executive council, with each executive member chairing a committee. Under this system, we were able to get more students involved and we accomplished more than ever before. It was our first year for running a number of what will hopefully become annual events; the grade 10 assembly, international week, the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic, and the grade 10 organized Battle of the Bands. Much of the success we experienced this year is due to the first year efforts of Ms. Stiles, whose dedication to the students of Scona was felt everyday this year. Thank you for giving so much, Ms. Stiles.

Congratulations to everyone who supported S.U. this year for helping us set an unprecedented standard of student involvement and community service at Strathcona. To those who are leaving Strathcona, remember what you have accomplished and be proud of it. To those who remain behind, take the initiative to not only live up to the tradition, but to surpass it and create new traditions for the future.

-Sheamus Murphy

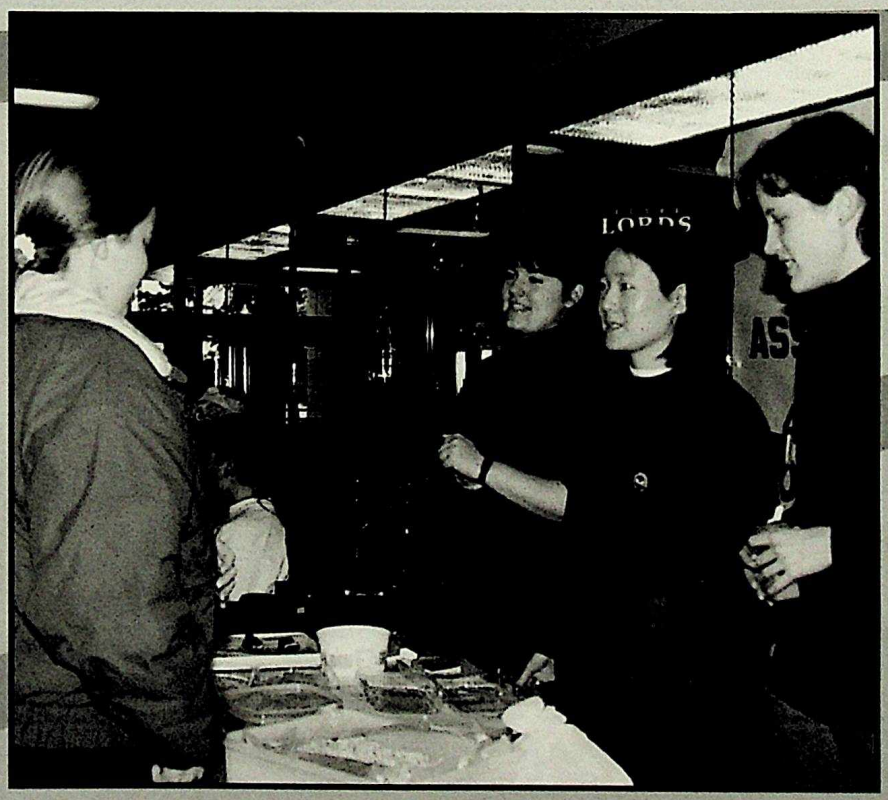
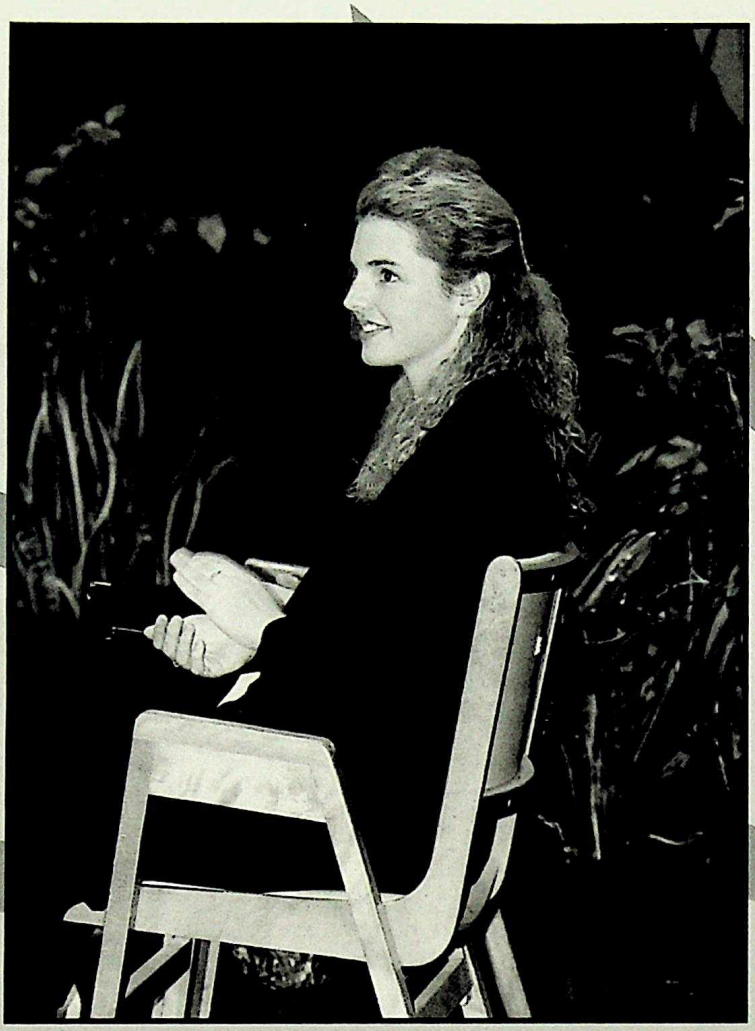
Amnesty had another great year with all the people who helped out. The group held a bakesale again this Christmas as a fundraiser for a number of different activities. Another Christmas activity undertaken by the group was a Christmas card campaign. Christmas cards were collected from a great many people, and after they had all been signed they were distributed to political prisoners worldwide. There was even a chance for a second bakesale this year, this time during International week. Instead of Christmas goodies, Amnesty was able to collect and sell a number of different ethnic foods. The group's future looks good for next year, as long as Scona students continue to show their support for the bakesales and other events Amnesty holds.



So many tasty choices. Marika Warren, Wendy Hum and Annette Stupar at an Amnesty bake sale.

Grad Council



All of the people on this year's Grad Council formed a special bond with each other, and the result was one of the most successful Grad's in Scona's recent history. From the many fundraising activities to tasting food for the banquet, this closely knit group of people worked and worried together. Their dedication was enough to ensure that the proceedings were perfect in every detail. A special thanks goes out to Mrs. Thresher and Mrs. van Leenen for their time and support.

Newspaper, SCAM and Radio Clubs

Lords In Print

Perhaps one of the most notable aspects of Strathcona is the fact that we have a school where the students and administration are not only open to, but are also excited to try new initiatives. Back in September when the need for a school newspaper was seen, the founding crew of the LIP was told to go for it, and we did! Ten months later, we are proud to say that the LIP was successfully published three times. Each issue was a hit. Of course, we did have our ups and downs, but due to a talented and dedicated editing team along with a mighty force of staff writers, there was no obstacle too steep for us to climb. Now that the LIP is part of the mighty Scona tradition of excellence, we are determined to keep the presses running. Next year, look out for your copy of the LIP, cause the best is yet to come.

SCAM Club

What is SCAM? An association of criminals offering services such as 3-hole-punched paper in return for your life savings and textbooks? An underground organization in Strathcona? The KGB, FBI or CIA equivalent for this relatively small, but powerful high school?

Actually this acronym for Scona Communications and Media is a club whose objectives are far less insidious, but just as encompassing as those organizations mentioned above. We make it our business to know about all goings-on in Strathcona. Not only that, but SCAM publicizes this to the community, the school and the parents.

In its third year of operation, SCAM (MACS backwards) was, for the first time, represented at the first pep rally of the year. But perhaps the aspect that stands out the most, after 10 months and 10 Lord Award winners, is that SCAM has been successful in recognizing the great range of talent that Scona students have. We did this through sending out information to media contacts, setting up the popular display board, writing articles for the Scona L.I.P. and helping with the newsletter.

The monthly Lord Award program, this being only the second year SCAM has offered it, was expanded so that all students filled out information sheets about their extracurricular activities. These helped us in choosing the recipients of this award, those who have excelled in any area in or out of school.

Also new in 1995 was a project for identifying SCAM members by ordering t-shirts for everyone. This involved compiling ideas, fundraising and the help of Art 30 students in designing a new logo for the club.

Members who contributed this year were president Eric Matheson-Jones, vice-presidents Shelley Lidkea and Simer Jandu, as well as Gina DeWolfe, Melissa Germann, Julie Betke, Yasmeen Issa, Faisal Karmali and Diane Wong. Thanks go to Mrs. St. Cyr for making this year run smoothly for the SCAM club.

Radio Club

Perhaps one of the school's least visible (but certainly the most audible) clubs is the Radio Club. Mr Yeske and this small group of D.J.'s were the people responsible for filling Scona's hallways with music, be it heavy metal, country music or something less extreme.

All of the Radio Club members got the chance to act as D.J.'s during early mornings and noon hours throughout the year. The club had no particular captain, but instead functioned as a more or less self-directed group of volunteers dedicated to "the promotion of culture and world peace."

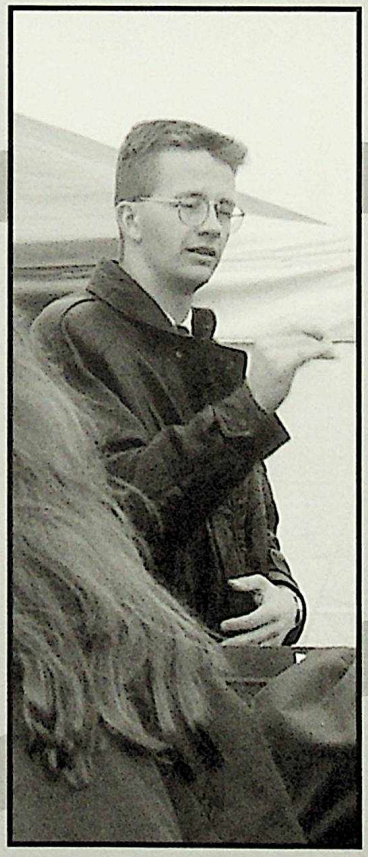
Many students were dressed just as fine as Colin McGuire for this Senior Band performance.

Eyes on her music, Teri Walker swings along to one of the Jazz Band's tunes.

Joel Guilbert provides the electric bass for the Scona Jazz band.



Mr. Klause wasn't the only person to feel the chill of an early winter performance outdoors - he didn't have his lips to a piece of metal though.

Scona Bands

The Junior Band had a tremendous year, thanks to a few mentionable highlights. The field trip to the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra gave everyone a chance to see professional musicians in action, and the chance to play at the grade12 Commencements was also relished. Competion in the Kiwanis Festival yielded a ranking of 'superior', and in Red Deer the Band was awarded 'excellence' standing.

One of the events that made 1995 an excellent year for the Senior Band was the chance to play at the beginning of construction ceremony for the new Alzheimer's Clinic. Despite the sub-zero weather, the band played on. Trumpeter Gary Guthman amazed everyone at the Christmas concert with his ability to both play and conduct superbly. This year's EPS honour band was swelled with Scona players, many of whom took first chair positions. The Senior Band took a distinction award in Kiwanis competition, and a silver medal in the Alberta Band Festival. Congratulations also go to the Brass Quintet for their first place finish. All things considered, this was a fabulous year for the Senior Band.

For the years that Strathcona has had a Jazz Ensemble, this year it has attained its greatest successes. Their swingin' maestro, Cool Cat Mr. Klause, and a good reputation in the community were able to hook performances for Scona by such artists as Gary Guthman and the Ken Sangster Trio. The presence of a number of strong musicians in the ensemble meant Scona was a hot ticket for the Yardbird Suite's Jazz Works Festival and the Wetaskiwin Jazz Nite. Other highlights? Scona dazzled at the U of A Hospital's President's retirement night, screamed some hot sax at Festival Canada in Banff, and had everyone jumpin' at the grade 12 Commencement exercises. The Scona Jazz Ensemble will fly higher and continue the soul which it takes to swing high and groove hard!

Computer Club

This year has certainly been an eventful one for Scona's Computer Club. Members met Wednesdays to do things like working on assignments, cruising the information highway, sending electronic mail to various people, and exploring the expanding world of multimedia. In short, it was a good chance for all the members of the club to share their love of computing with others.

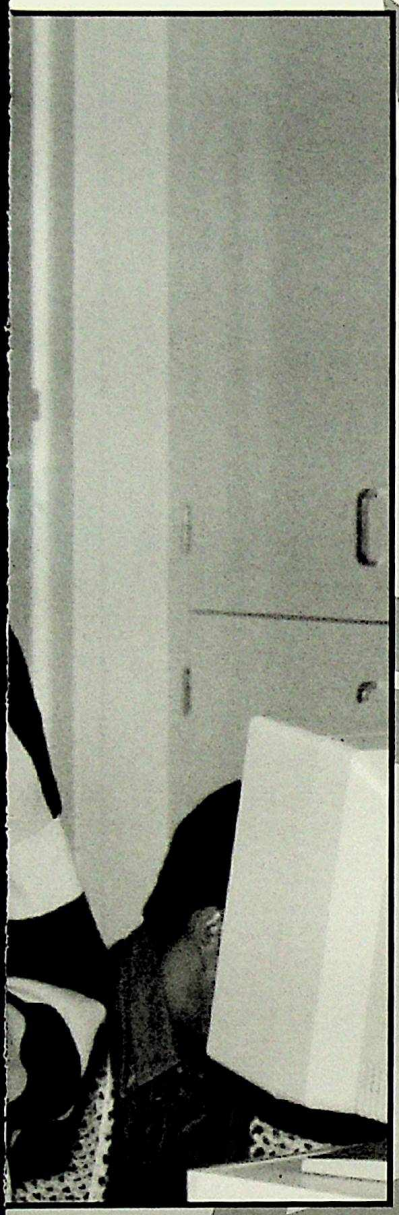
This year a number of students competed in the Computer Club Programming Contest, a chance to test their programming abilities on both beginner and advanced problems. In June, the club organized the Edmonton Computer Programming Contest, in which students from the public and separate school boards competed for hardware, software and communications prizes donated by local businesses.

Another new experience for members of the Computer Club this year was the chance to attend sessions on how to use the information highway. Both students and teachers were fascinated by the quantity of information available and the ease at which they could travel throughout the Internet.

Science Olympics

Scona - The Next Generation! This was the name for the team of students who competed for Scona in the annual Science Olympics held at the convention centre, and it served them well. The Scona team did well in the three events they competed in: the pasta bridge, the concrete chemistry, and the mystery biology event. Their pasta bridge held an amazing 20.6kg, not far off from the 21kg they had predicted (and not bad for ordinary lasagna). While the concrete event didn't go so well, the team placed third in the biology event.

The team had help all the way up to the competition from both Mr. Golightly and Mr. Benterud, and Leo McDonald. Mr. McDonald is a U of A student doing research for his PhD thesis on how students learn science. He helped the team throughout their preparation, and interviewed them when the competition was over. Somewhat of a change for the students to be part of the experiment, rather than the experimenters, but a good change.



Michael Ali looms large over a lasagna bridge, designed to hold as much weight as possible.

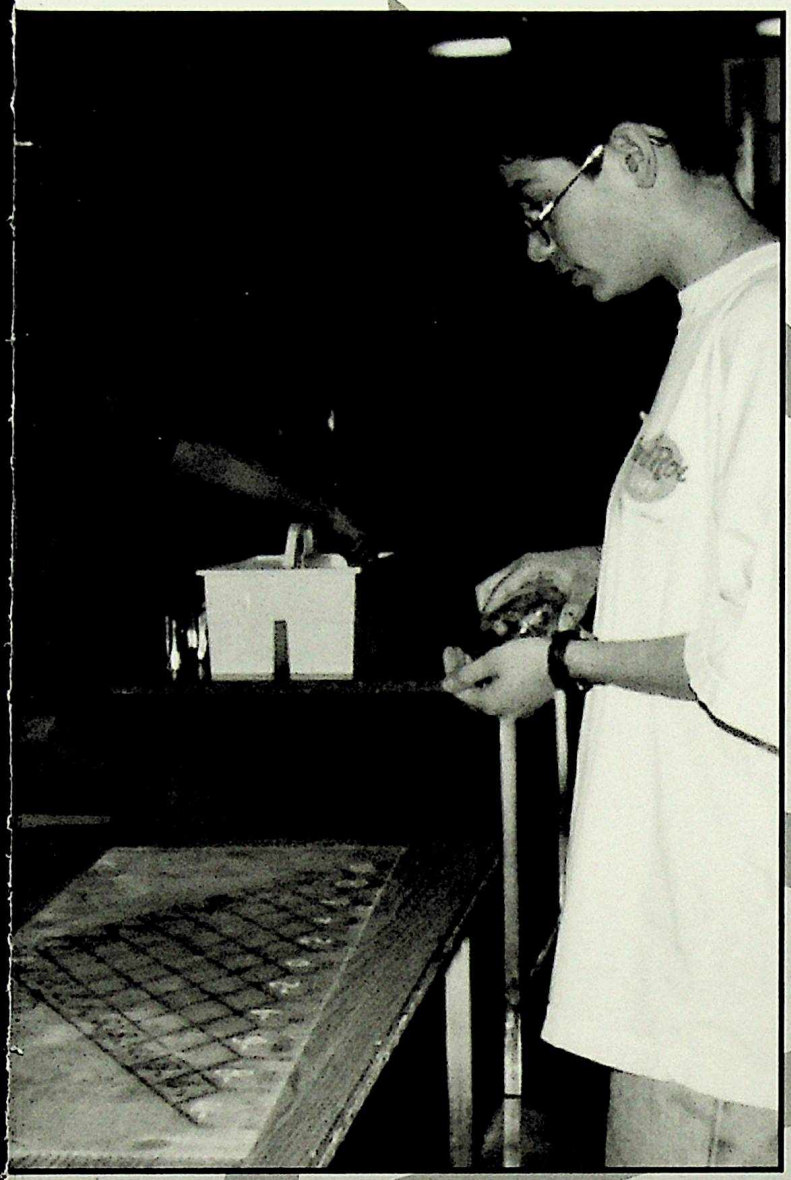
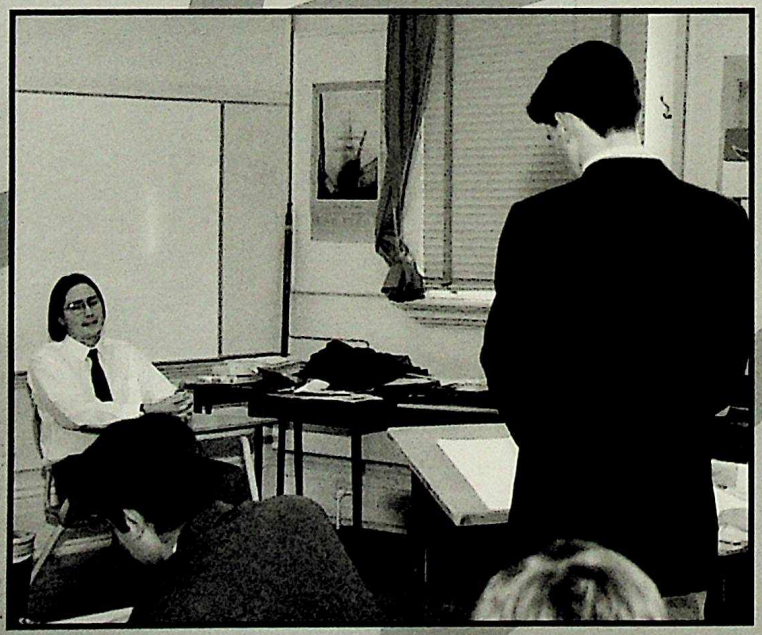
Math and Debate Clubs

This year's Debate Club was enthusiastic, which made up for the lack of tournaments. New members attended an orientation at Old Scona in the beginning of the season where they learned research skills and the "how-to's" of debating. The highlights of the year included Model Legislature and Mock Trials. Thanks to all the members for your interest and to the coaches for their guidance.

This year, as in many previous ones, Scona students have demonstrated that competion doesn't need to be physical for the Lords to do well. The Cayley, Fermat and Euclid Math Contests challenged grade 10, 11 and 12 students respectively. Top scores in the school went to Tim Church, Robbie Koyich and Faisal Karmali. Other successful competitions were the Descartes Math contest, Alberta High School math competition, and the Canadian National Math League Competition.

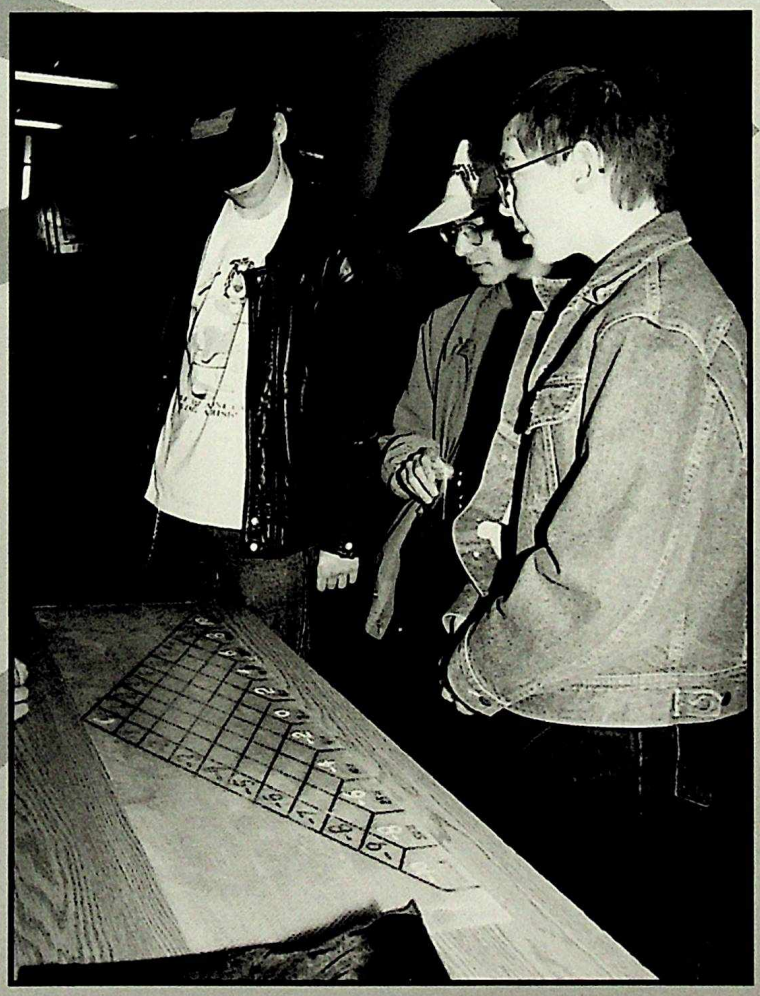


Adrianna D'Ilio tries her luck at a math week table with the help of two Math Club members.



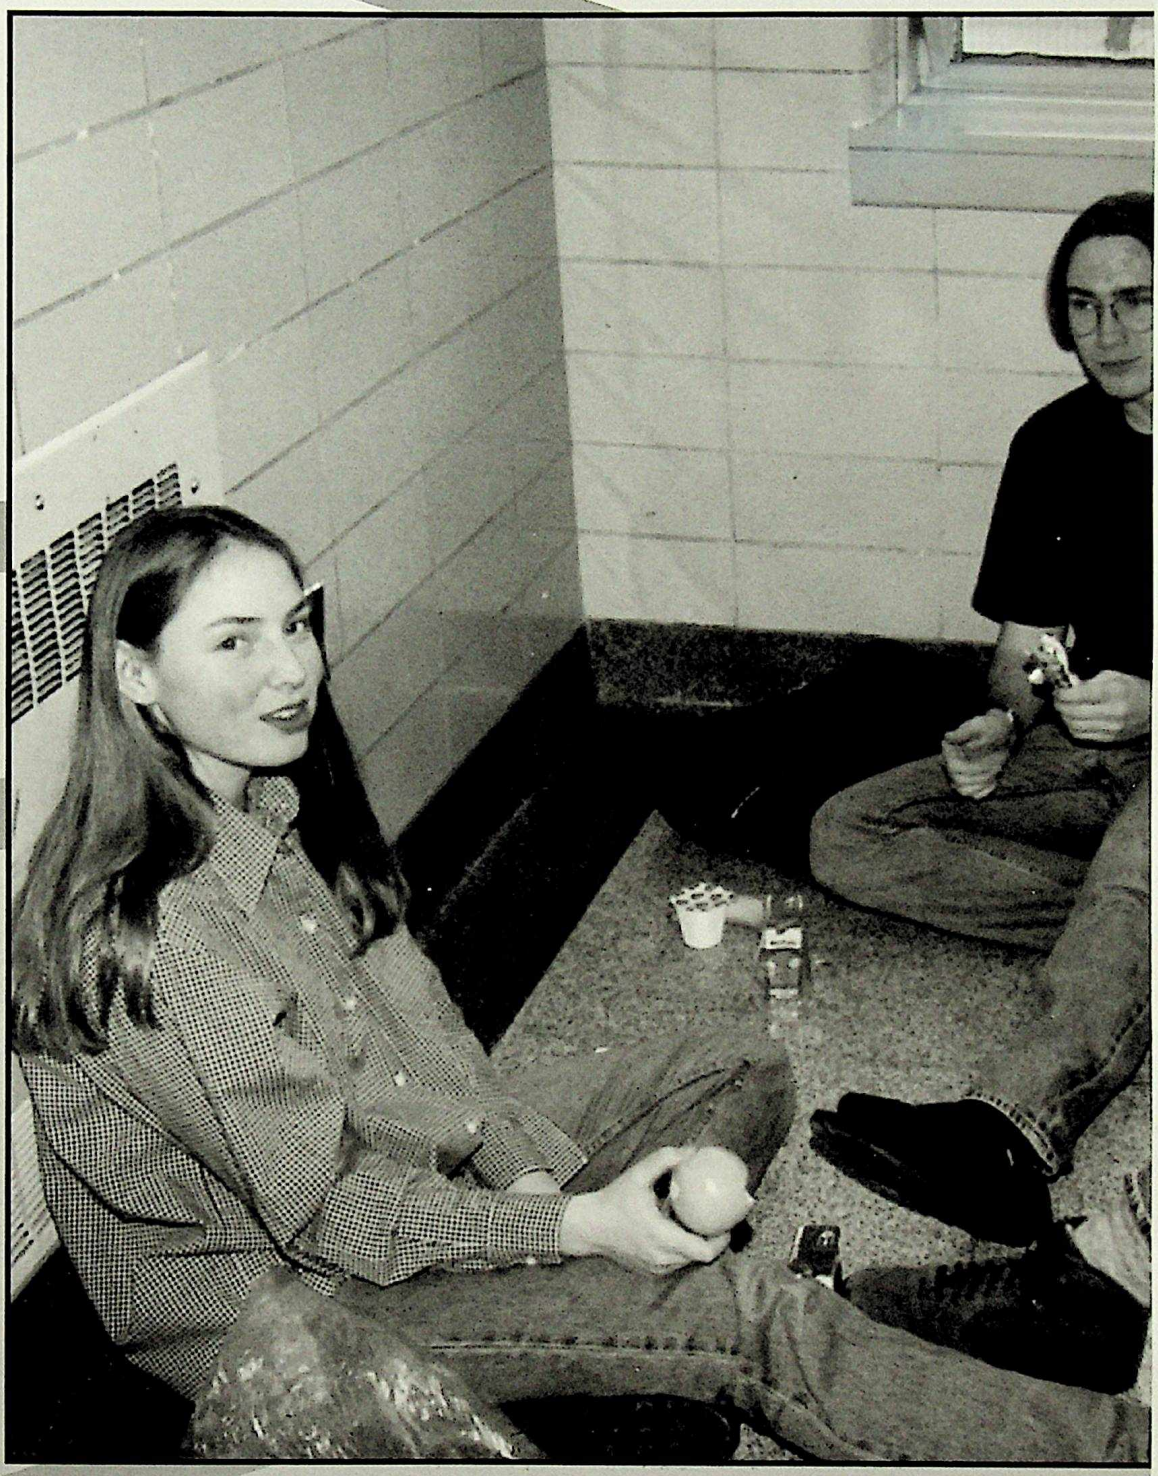
Trying too beat the odds is what math week is all about. Who would think it would be this fun though?

The precise rules of conduct in debating are a little like court, as Sheamus Murphy must realize.

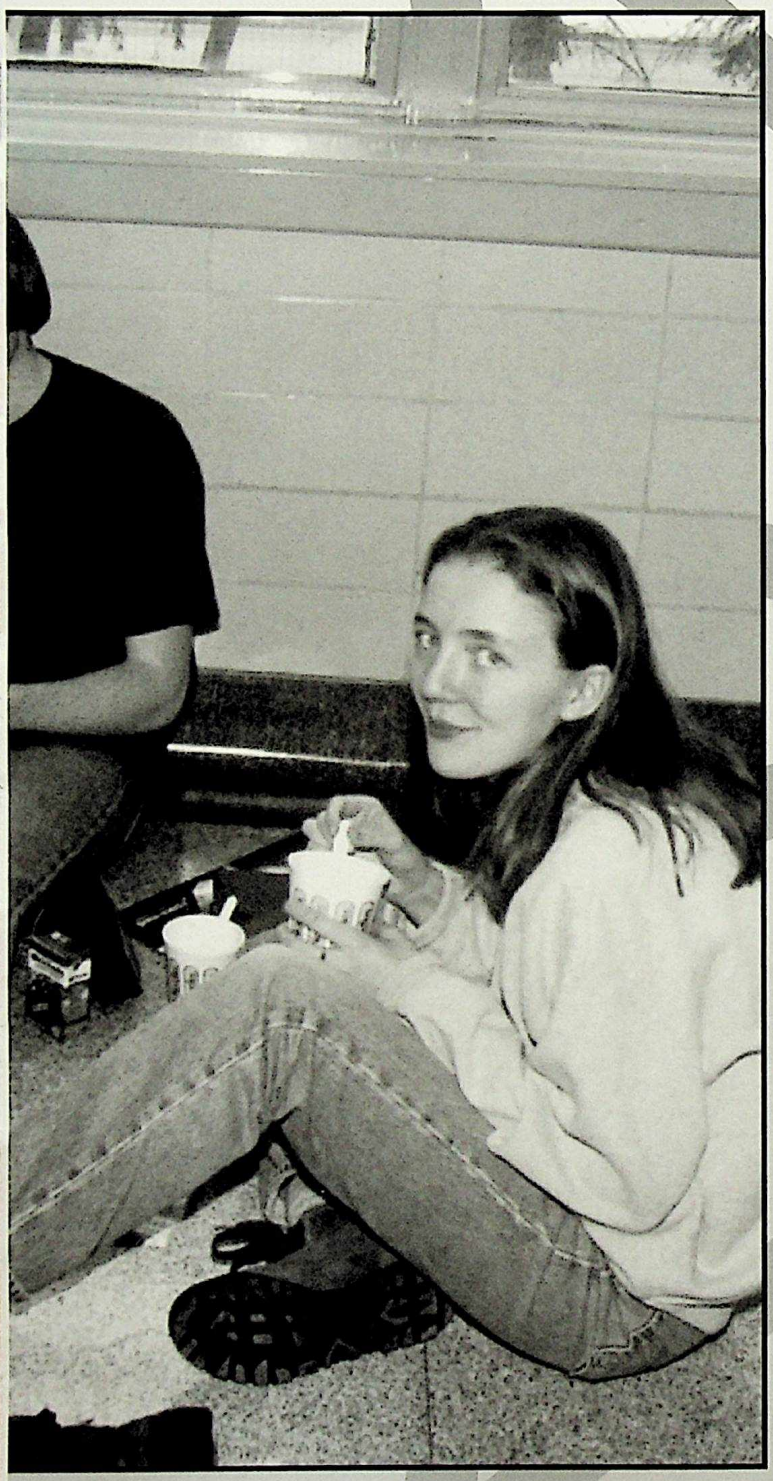


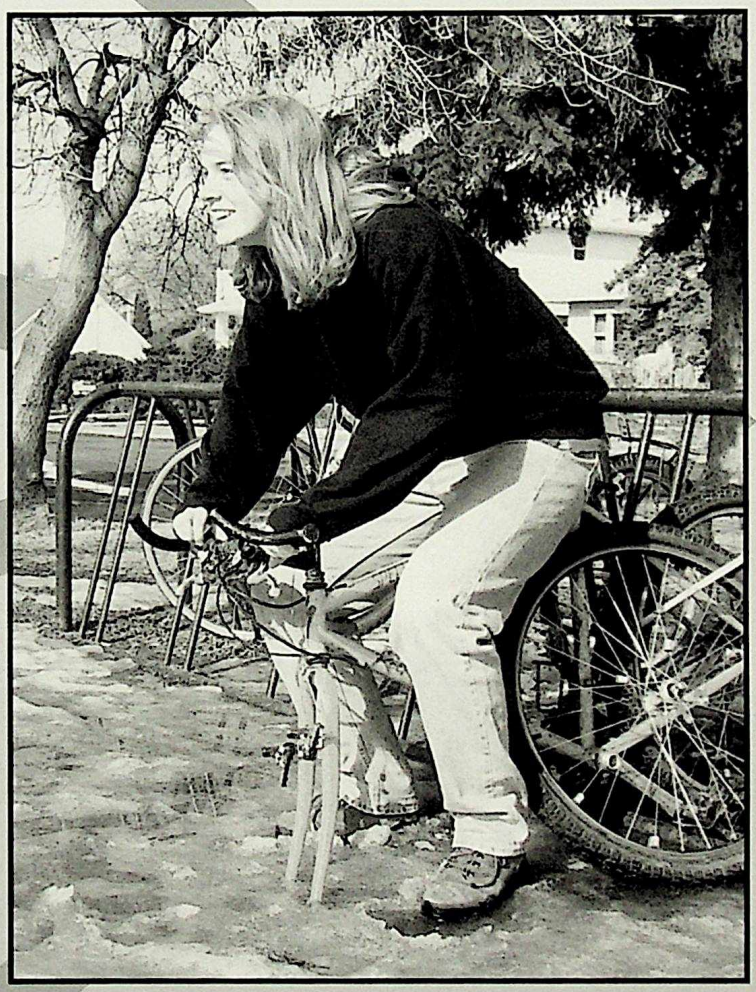
Is that a regulation math week board game? Inquisitive students check out the attractions.

Who to



Expect



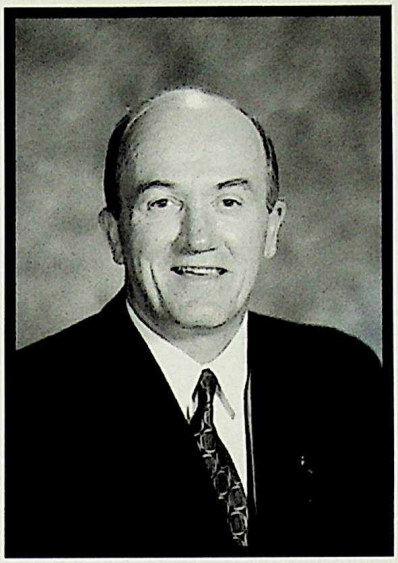


Aisling Murphy, Sheamus Murphy and Colleen Brown do lunch indoors, probably due to the fact that it's winter outside.

Something's missing here. Shauna Begg seems eager to start the riding season, despite the slush, the fact that the front wheel isn't on, and that's not her bike.

Strathcona Teachers and Support Staff

Principal's Message



This has been a very exciting year at Strathcona. We have managed to maintain our outstanding record of student acheivement in academics, athletics and fine arts and our school spirit has never been higher.

Our school motto "Ut Qui Ministrat" - "As One Who Serves" was strongly emphasized this year and Strathcona students and staff provided outstanding service to our school and excelled in service to our community. In particular, I am pleased with the continuing development of our partnership with the University of Alberta Hospital. This year a number of our students served as tutors to the hospital staff who were improving their literacy and numeracy skills and our Scona Pride club contributed to the hospital's pediatric ward.

I would like to thank our yearbook students and staff for producing this excellent record of the activities, events, successes, and people that will be remembered from our 1994-95 school year

The Height of Embarrassment

When we asked various teachers about their most embarrassing moments, we expected only short answers. Mr. Richards response was a surprise with its elevated candidness and length. Other teachers' respones can still be found on page 105. -Ed.

In November 1970, I was taking my Ski Instructors Course at Sunshine Village along with 200 other "wanna-be" instructors. The week-long course was held in bitterly cold (-30°C) Alberta weather, and we spent 5 hours a day receiving "on snow" instruction. At the end of the day, a few of us would go down to the sauna in the main lodge for a hot warm-up. The sauna was "communal", being located between the women's and men's changing and shower facilities. "Towels only" was the attire in the sauna. After heating sufficiently, I suggested that we go "roll in the snow". Several of us decided to do so, and, as there was a door exiting the building from the men's change room, we dropped our towels at the door and ran out naked to roll in the snow. When finished, we picked up our towels and proceeded back to the sauna to re-warm our now tingling bodies.

We carried on like this for the first two days, but on the third day the outside door locked behind us. We were trapped outside at -30°C, naked! What would you do? Pounding on the door did no good - there was no one inside to hear us. So, we ran to the MAIN ENTRANCE of the lodge and the 8 of us went naked through the lobby, reception area and back to sauna via the main staircase!

We were the talk of the course for the whole week! Yep, I've streaked the Sunshine Village lodge - unintentionally!

What a horrible/wonderful time. So many cruel/ considerate people. So many boring/fun experiences. Many stupid/intelligent people. Scona, like any other place, has always/never had it all/anything. All you ever had to do was look in the wrong/right place to find/loose whatever you wanted. So many mixed emotions about this place, but the predominant one is that I'll be very, very glad/sad to see it fade into the past. Love/hate ya Goodbye!!

Life is an ambition, a challenge we will all eventually conquer. We all have made it through one of the difficult parts. There is a lot more of the roller-coaster ride to go. But don't worry, friends will always be there with you, all the way. I have the best friends that anyone could ever have! You guys have supported me through the years and I appreciate it—so much that words can't describe it. Thanx to my family and friends.

Commencement

The graduating class of 1995 undoubtedly had one of the most memorable Commencement evenings of any class in recent years. Who could forget those two hours of watching our friends stroll across the stage of the Jubilee Auditorium? With over four hundred graduating students, the experience was inevitably engraved into our memories of high school. Tim Hoyles and Ryan Dorward going barefoot across the stage helped to show the rest of us how lightly things could be taken, and perhaps some year a graduate will realize before the evening to bring a Game Boy, an idea which comes to many only after everything has finished. The evening was an important one for more than the monotony though - the students processional was broken up strategically by various forms of entertainment.

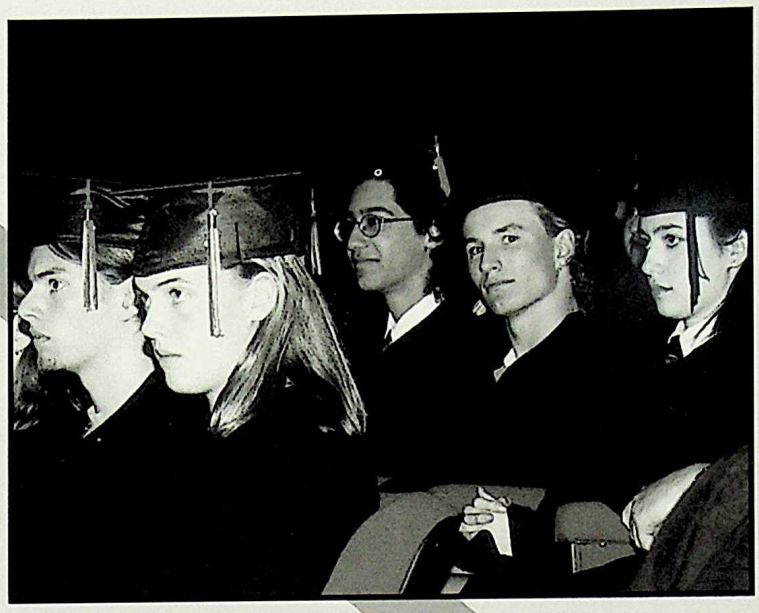
Moving tassles has always been Mr. Anderson's job, here flipping the one on Sean Birch's cap.

Steven Phillipson, Ryan Szarko, Joel Guilbert and Jamie Parr (not seen) combined to form One Time Wonders, another part of the evening's entertainment.

Sarah Mandolesi puts on her best smile for both Mr. Anderson and the many photographers.

Karl Schuller portrayed Forrest Gump in the historian's skit.

A side glance from Sebastian Jaromi as the processional of graduates crosses the stage.



Miah McDade again displays to an audience his love of jazz music with a solo from his composition "Off White".

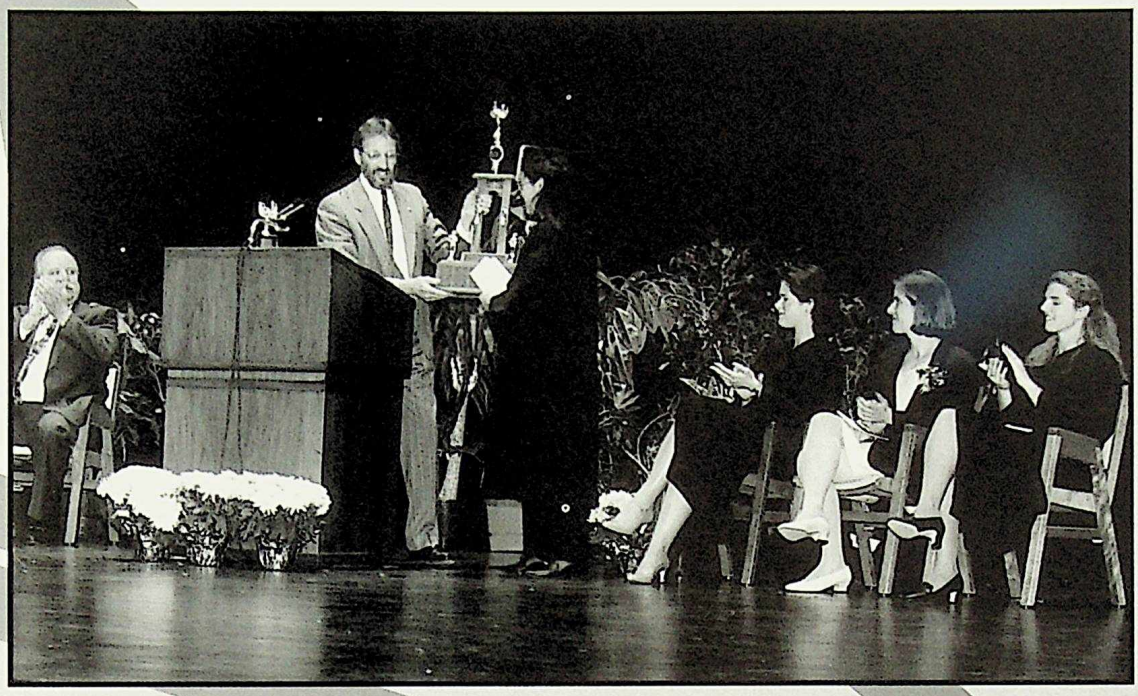
Commencement Vice-President Trish Hargrave started the entertainment by introducing Carolyn Yoo and Janet Melnyk. Carolyn's violin performance of "Hejre Kati" with Janet accompanying on the piano showed everyone present what Scona students are capable of. Further musical interludes by the Scona Jazz Quintet and One Time Wonders as well as a ballet performance from Karen Marcotte and Deanna Schnautz had the entire audience wondering how much more students could do that they didn't already know about.

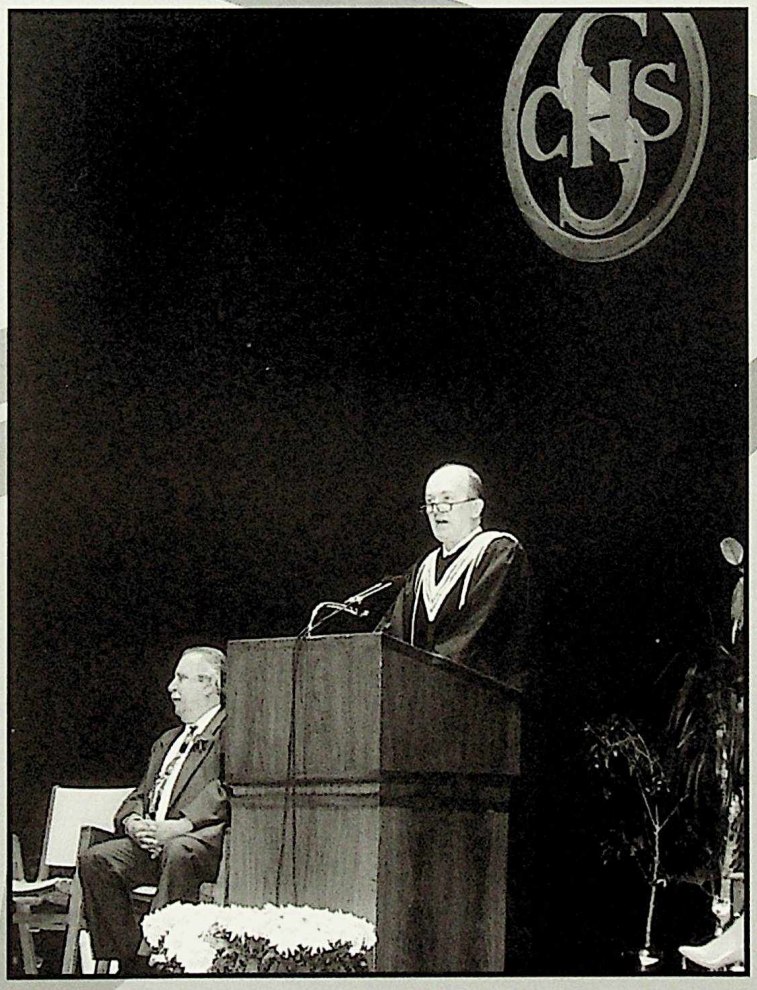
School board superintendent Nicholson, Mr. Anderson and keynote speaker Susan Scott all delivered encouraging messages as people who know the role students can go on to accept, and Diane Wong's valedictory speech showed us the same message from one of our peers. The only people not influenced by the evening were those at home sick, busy being entertained by a runny nose.

Holly and Amy Anderson lead the audience in O Canada with Anne Lefevre on piano.

Music for the evening is in part delivered by the junior band, led here by Mr. Klause.

Adam Stark on drums and Craig Schlegelmilch on bass guitar as part of the Scona Jazz quintet.

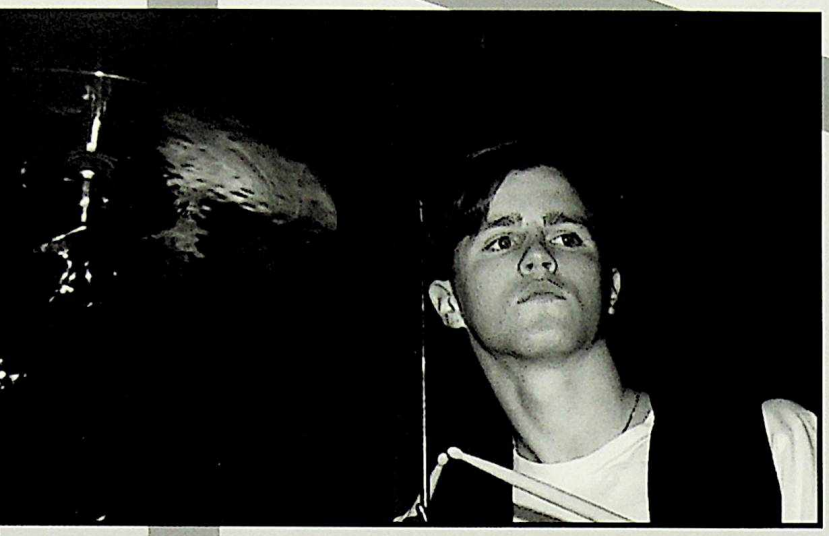




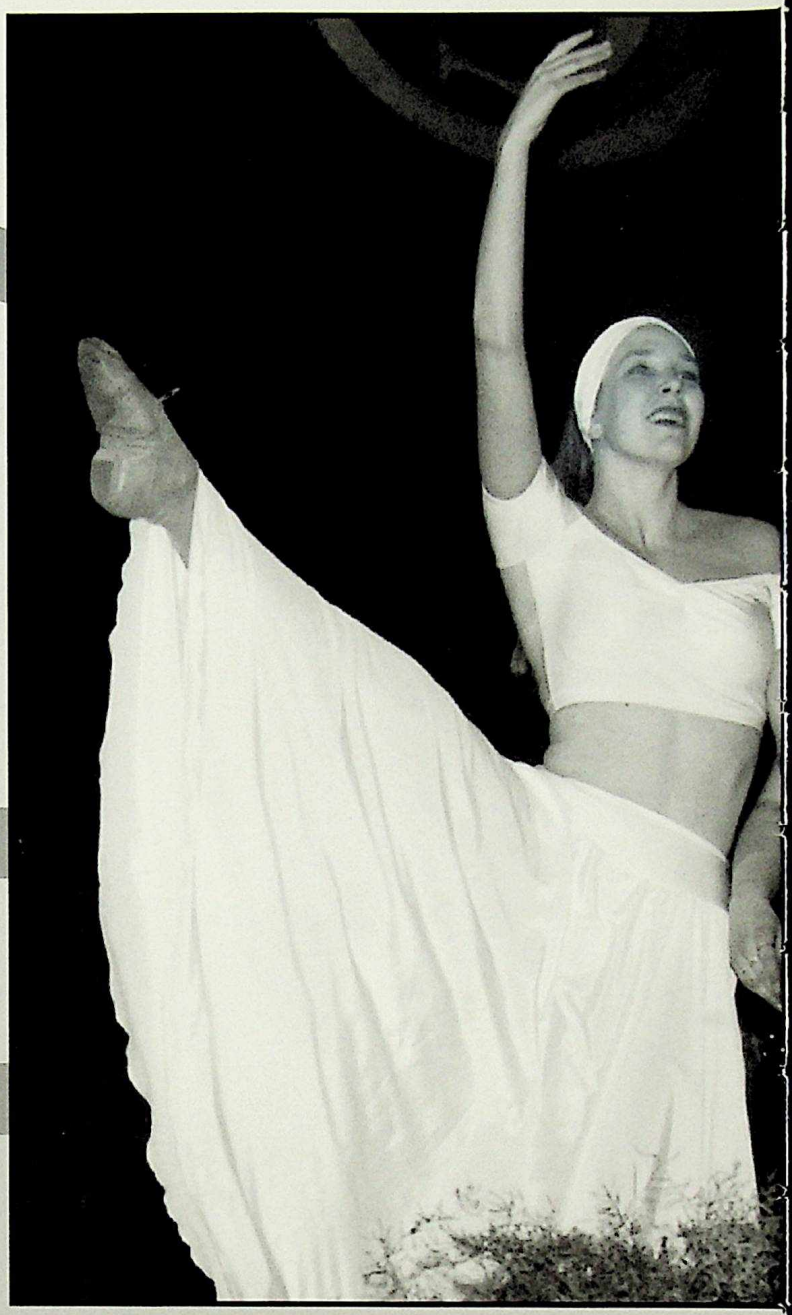
Diane Wong receives her valedictorian trophy from Mr. Harris early in the ceremony.

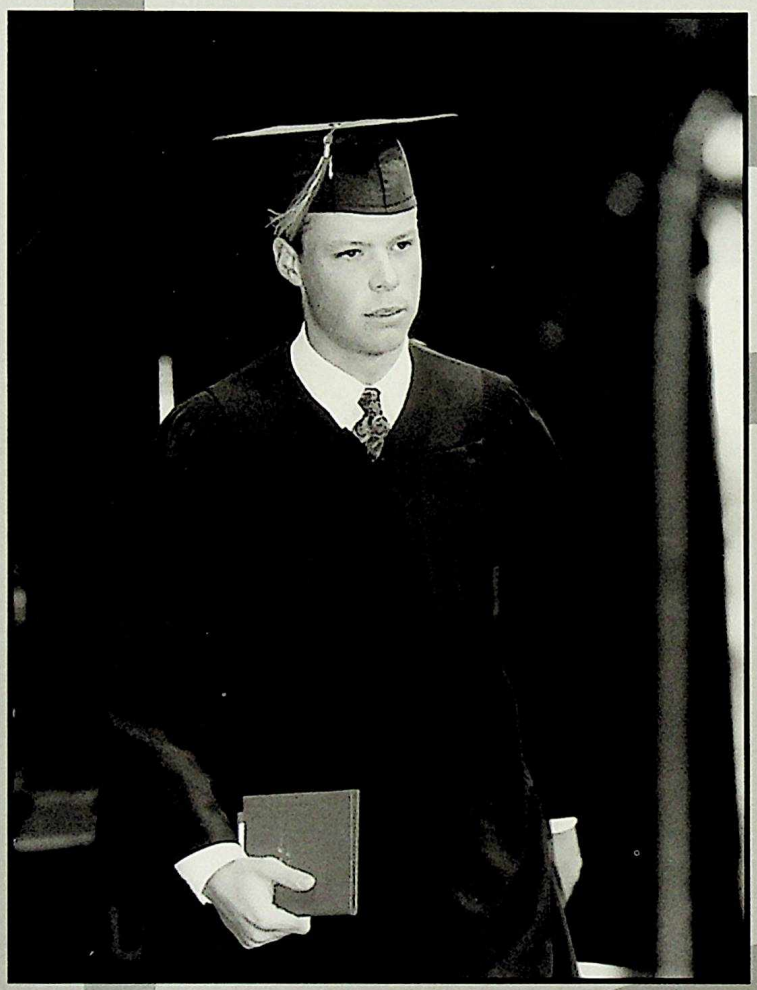
Mr. Anderson delivers the Principal's adress to the 1995 graduates and their families.

Jamie Parr provided the drums for One Time Wonders' song "Spiral Sky".

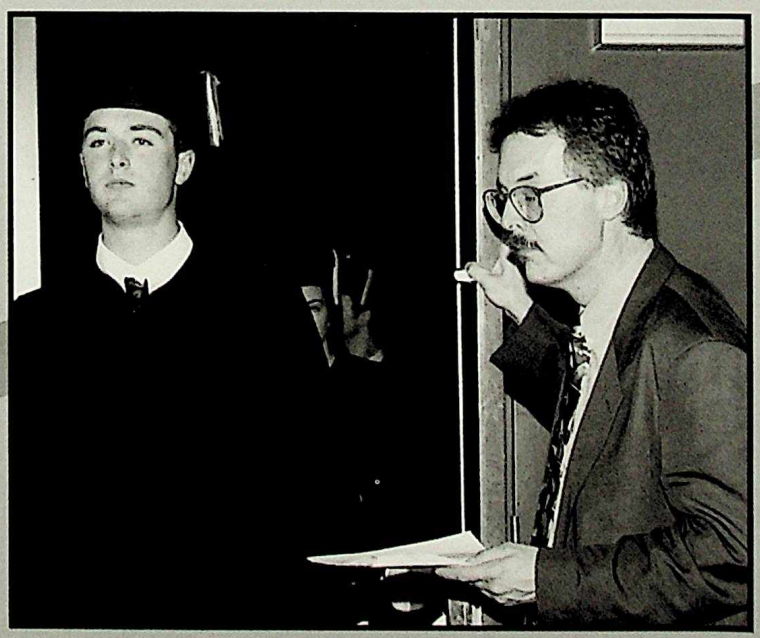


Karen Marcotte and Deanna Schnautz provided the audience with a taste of lyrical dance.



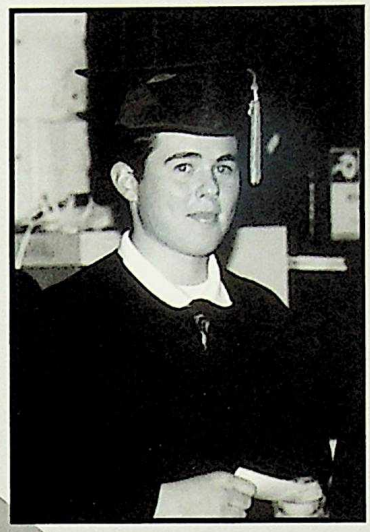


Sean Milne crosses the stage after receiving his diploma and shaking Mr. Anderson's hand.



Adam Rankin doesn't escape the scrutiny of Mr. Yeske, one of the teachers directing students backstage.

Ben Goble waits patiently just a few paces offstage.



Grad president Dana Pierce applaudes for one of the evening's many speakers

"Life is like a box of chocolates" was likely the only line the audience was expecting.

Carolyn Yoo opened the evening's entertainment with her performance of "Hejre Kati".

Mr. Anderson and Mr. Nicholson.

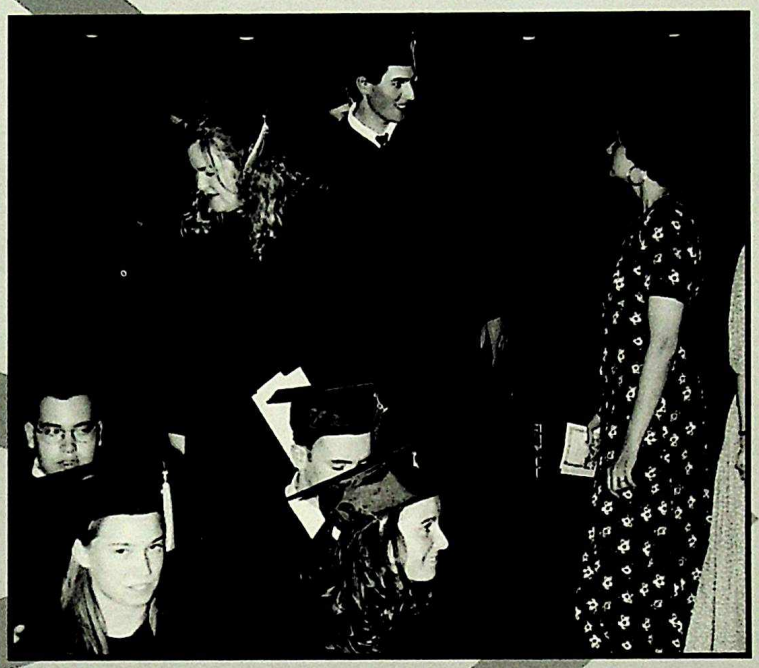
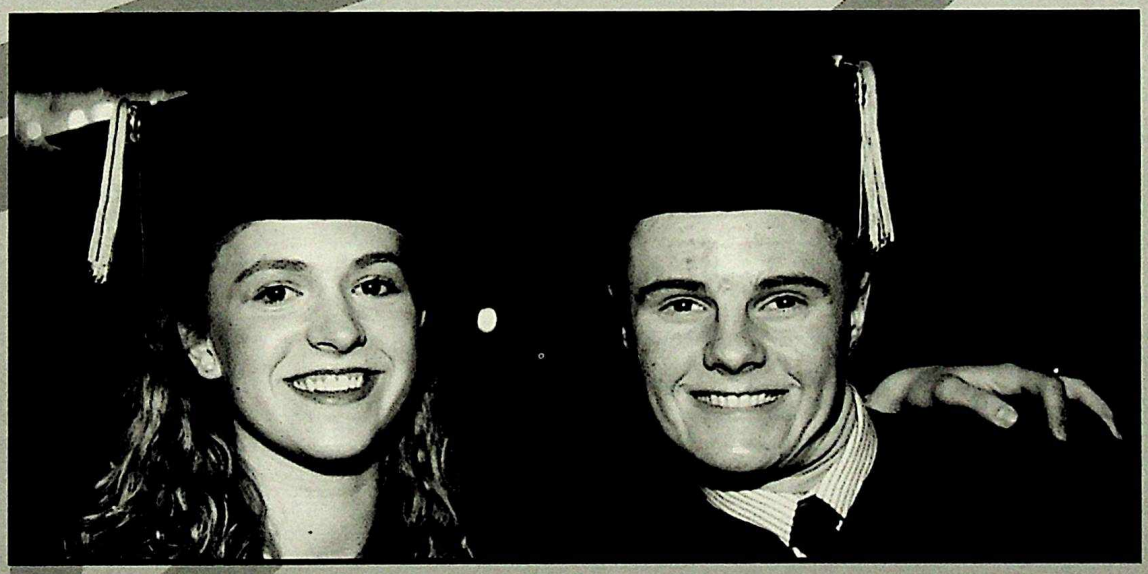
A rare picture of Mr. Gerun. He seemed almost omnipresent in his job as yearbook photographer, trying to catch every event and expression.

Mrs. Love-Pankonin directs Charlotte Berghofer and Jeremy Berman to their seats.





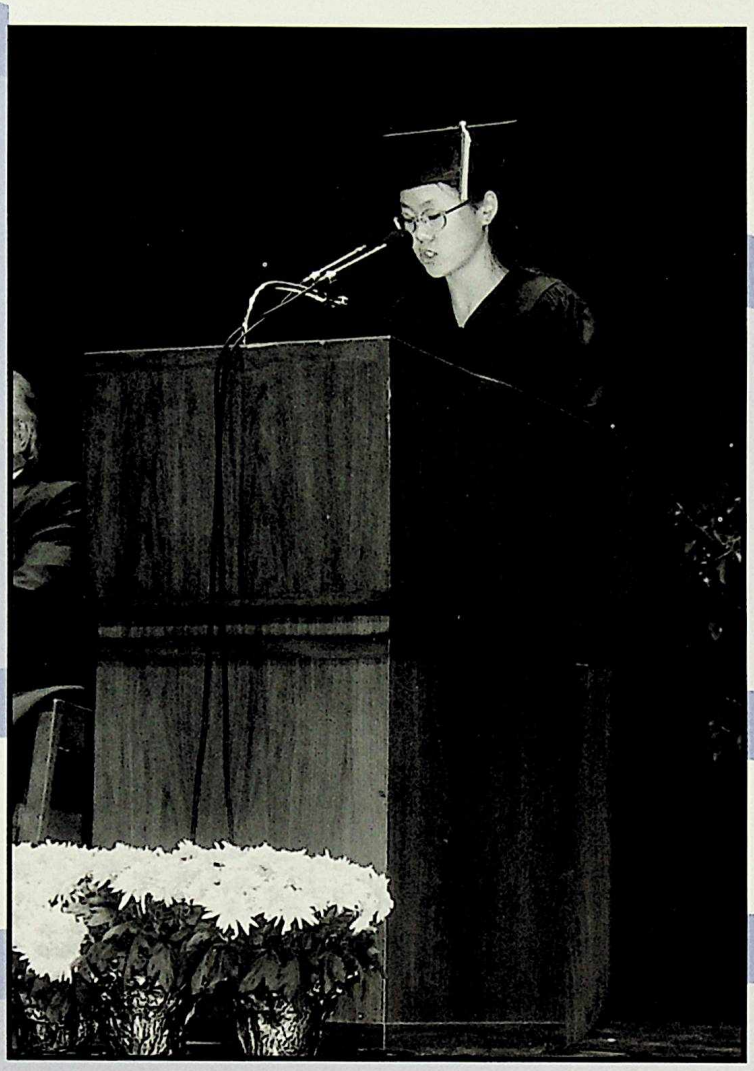
Kathryn Ewanchuk and Bob Malach appear happy to have partially graduated. The other event is the Grad Banquet, held a little over a week after the commencement evening.

1995 Valedictorian's Address

Good evening Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Anderson, Ms. Scott, teachers, honoured guests and fellow graduands. It is an honour to be representing the class of 1995. I would like to congratulate each of you for making it this far because you have accomplished a great deal in high school.

However, it is difficult to summarize the lives of 400 people in a few minutes. We've learned many things in these twelve years. We've learned that those who support us are invaluable. We've also learned that the life lessons cannot be photocopied for you. What else is of significance? We've learned how to handle the "waiting" and the "hurry up" periods, as Mr. Manson would call them. We've also learned that friends are important. They remind us to laugh at ourselves once in a while, and help us through the tedium of a Monday morning. We also have our teachers to thank who, although they seem to schedule four tests on the same day, have contributed to our success and made our final year enjoyable.

Tuition fees are rising. Counsellors have told us time and time again that it's more difficult to get a job, now, and...it is estimated that one will have at least two different careers in one's lifetime. Despite all of the competition this entails, I find there is hope that we will remain human and remember that success does not mean winning everything.



Diane Wong

With diploma in hand, there is a tendency to reflect on the past. While at one time, the greatest moral dilemmas were whether or not to send a friend back to "start" in the board game Sorry, we are now dealing with even greater problems, like developing our identities. There are basically two types of people in this world: those who question "why?" and those who take a "why not?" attitude. In other words, there are those with purpose and there are those who have no driving force behind them besides that of the current trend. The former make up the group of people who are creators, those who, in the search for reality, eventually find it, whether it be in an academic, athletic, fine arts or other area of talent. The latter include those who extend their palm upwards, either to beg for alms or to be punished simply for their inability to fit into society. The "why nots?" also include the pseudointellects who escape from moral values.

So as we take a step toward adulthood, as we cross the stage tonight, all of us should ponder over which group we belong to. Soon we will leave the "halls through which champions walk." We must prove that we are champions, and as we walk out the doors, carry the tradition and excellence with us. Ten years from now, we will no longer have anyone telling us that we received an A, or that we failed an exam. Judging excellence will be left in our own hands.

In closing, I'd like to read a quotation of Ayn Rand's, which in many ways sums up man's existence on this planet, and our progress through life thus far.

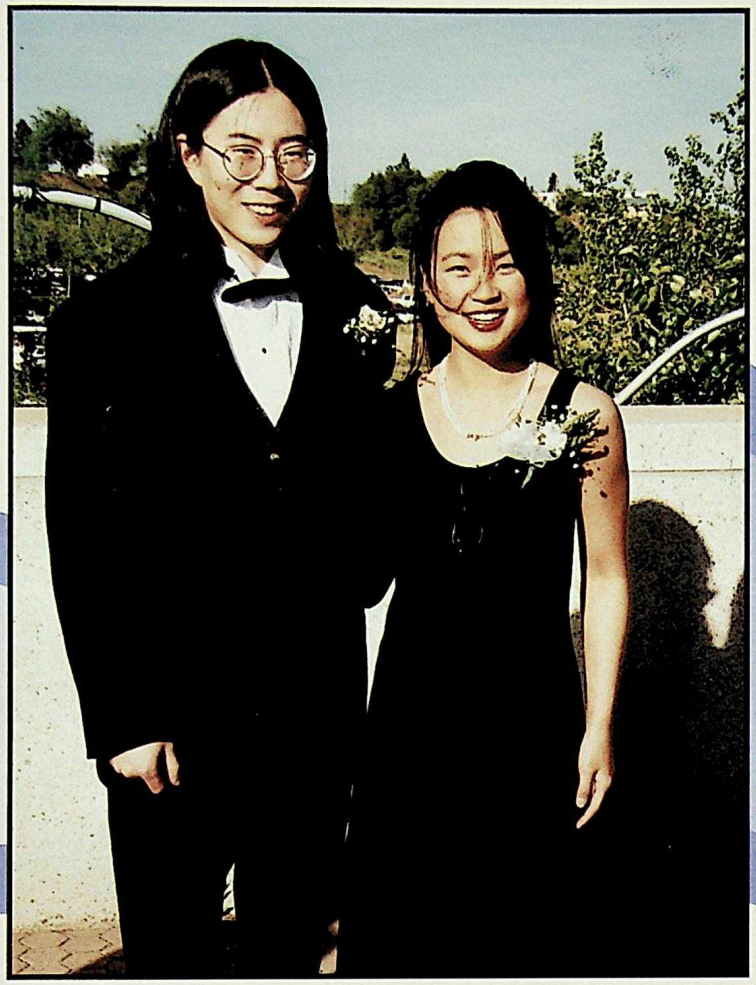
"Man perceives a blob of color; By integrating the evidence of his sight and his touch, he learns to identify it as a solid object; he learns to identify the object as a table; he learns that the table is wood; he learns that the wood consists of cells, that the cells consists of molecules, that the molecules consist of atoms. All through this process, the work of his mind consists of answers to a single question: What is it?"

Keeping this in mind, I encourage all of you to continue to ask questions.

The truth is out there.

Thank you and Farewell

Grad Banquet



Xu Yao and Theola Leung.

My goodness, we look absolutely fantastic! And why not, we have struggled and toiled to make it to the end of our high school career so now - THE PARTY! On the evening of May 26 gone were the wee tots who bawled for mommy on the first day of kindergarten, or those who found themselves terrifically lost during their early days at Scona; instead were a crowd of mature, experienced and attractive grads.

Despite the months of talk and preparation the night rapidly came; outfits donned, flowers securely fastened, the final touches for hair and make-up carefully made. READY - with extraordinary courage we entered the reception area at the Convention Centre to be blinded by flashes and forced into a multitude of poses by the parental paparazzi. Thankfully we were moved to the hall for dinner before anyone was permanently blinded.

Overcoming the difficulties of a poor sound system, the toasts and speeches were wonderful, touching, amusing and blissfully short and sweet. The dance that followed was a celebration beyond compare. Slowly the people left for their own parties, with them the beautiful decorations also thinning out.

The excitement, visiting, dancing and partying was packed into hours but seemed to last only seconds. One blessed evening without concern about the future, grades and exams which plagued us harried seniors. A night to remember ... and treasure.

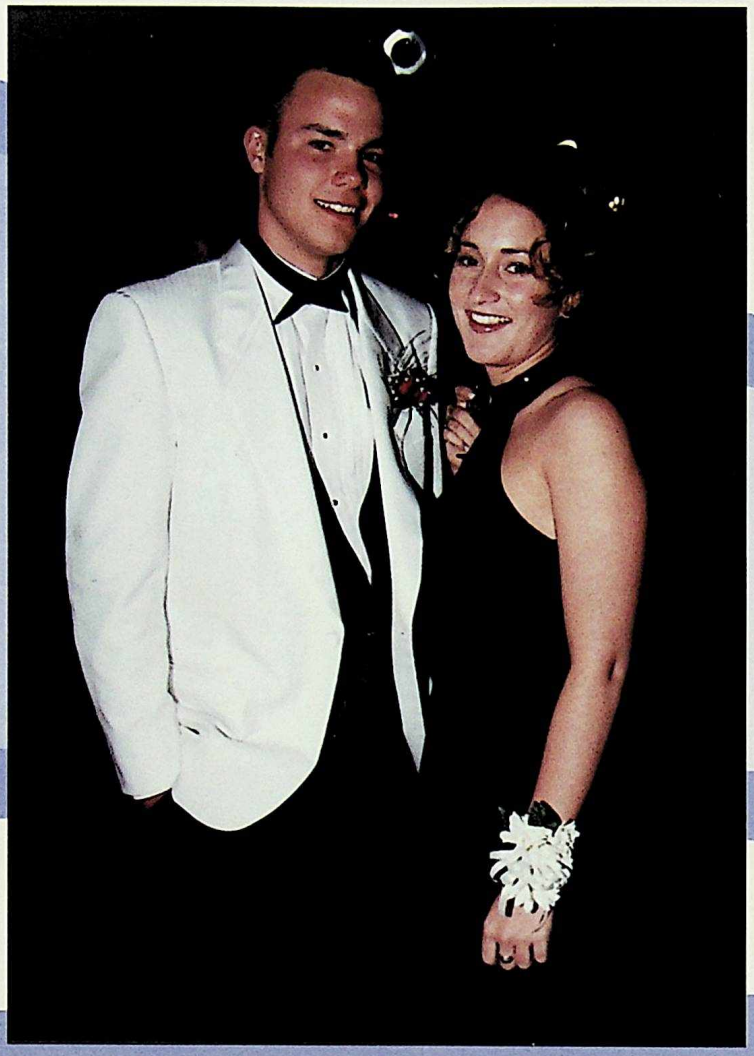
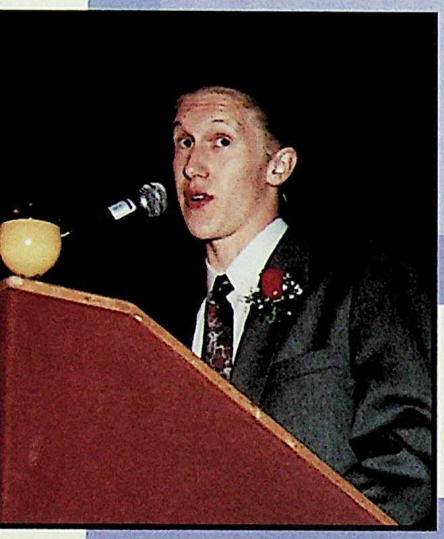
Sam Longson and Tracy Brommet kept cameras with them during the banquet, as many other people did.

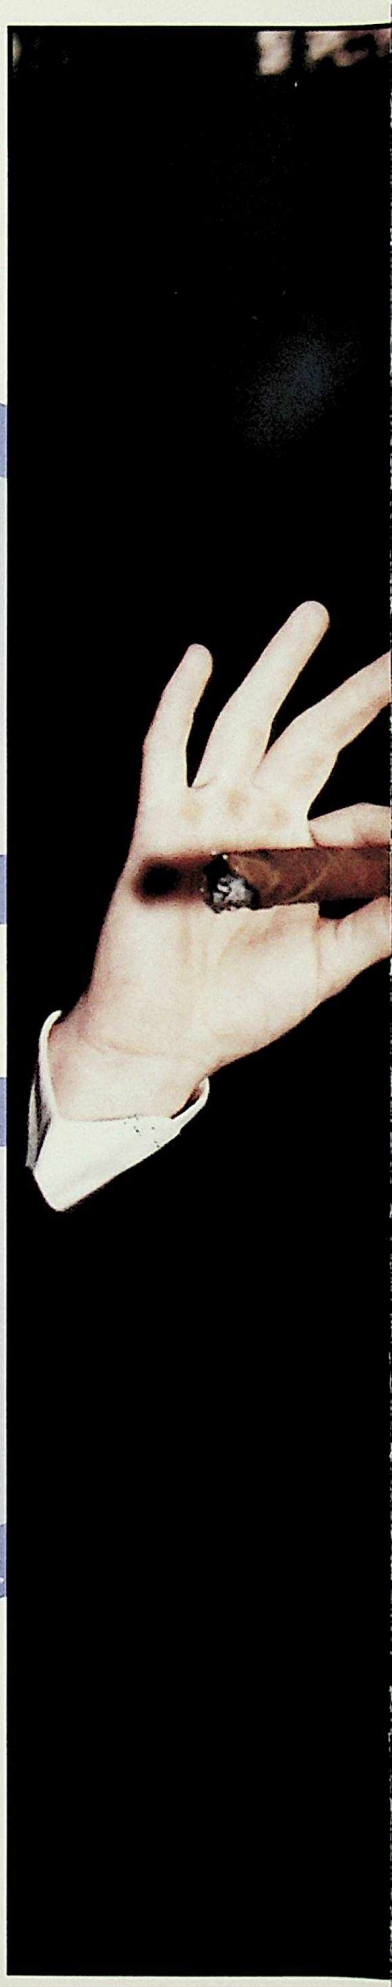
Ryan Oswald and Sarah Mandolesi.

Davis Foth gives the entire graduating class a sarcastic look during his toast.

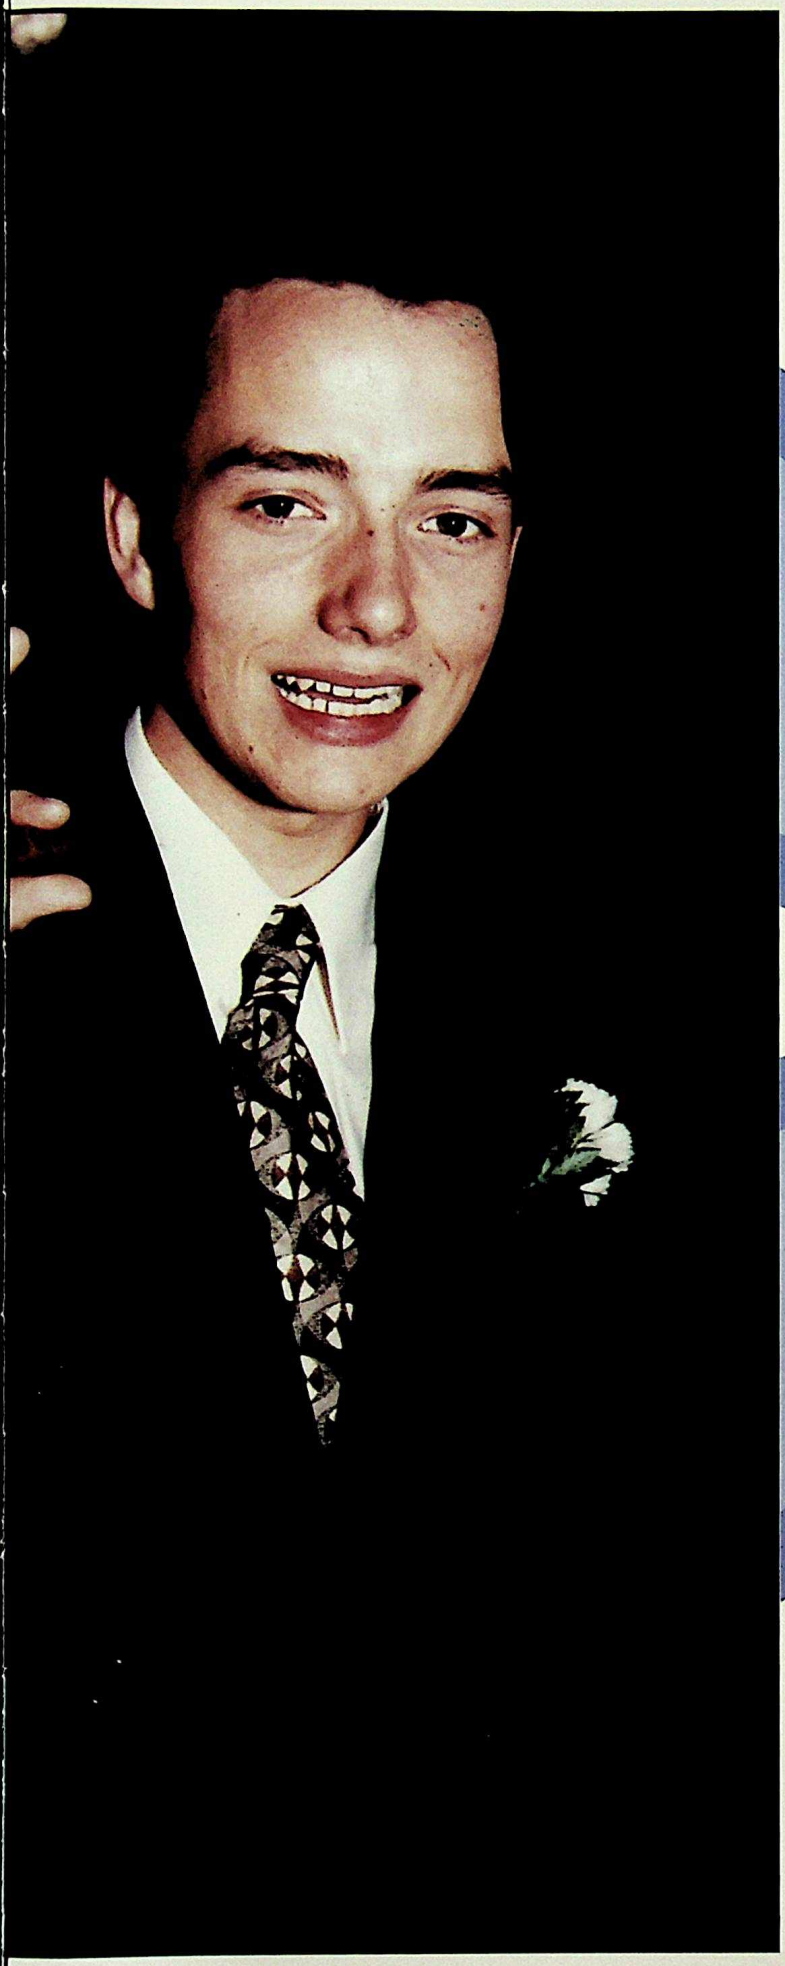




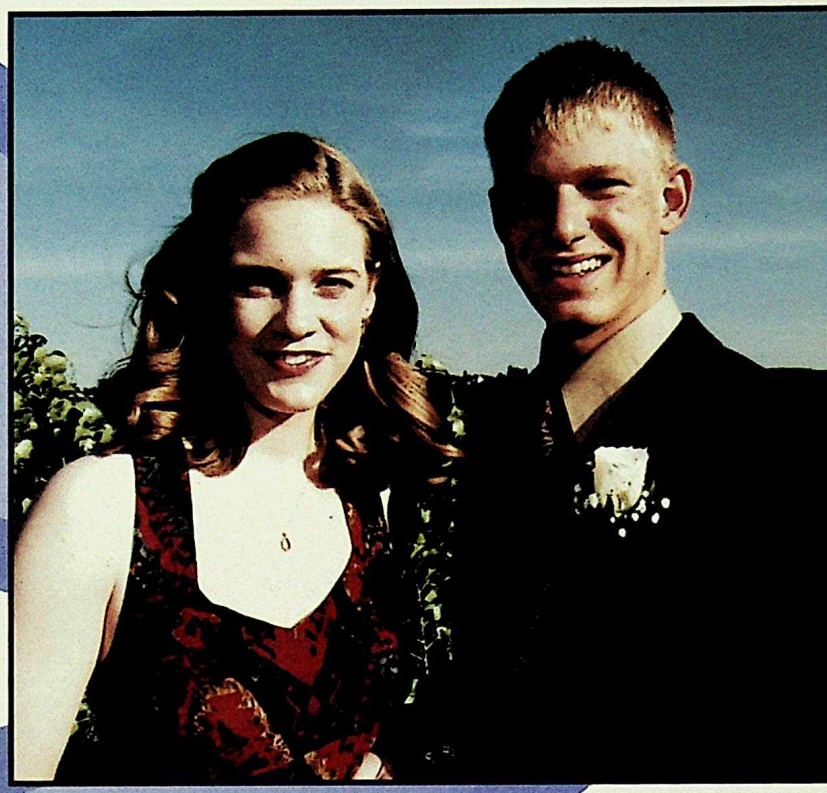
Crystal Drew and Adrian Ellis, two of the many prominent Scona actors, put on their best faces.

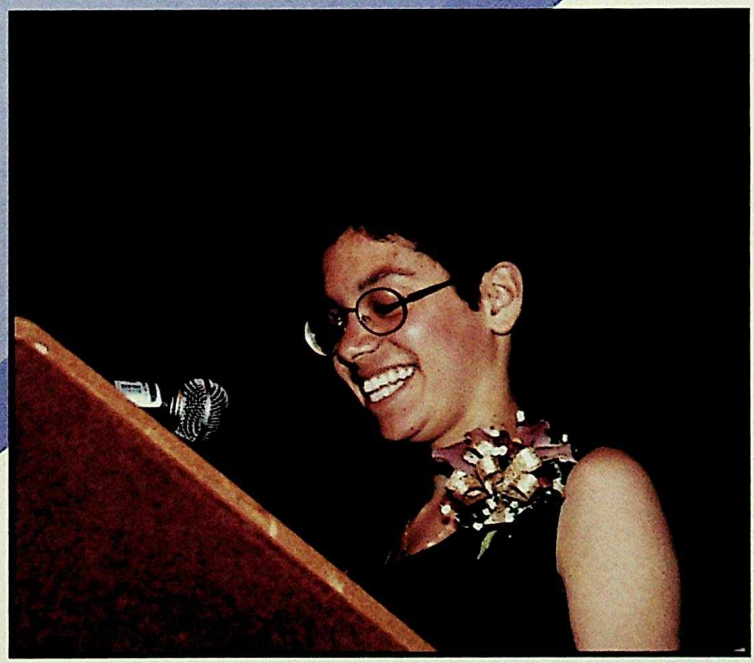


Dave Green enjoys one of the pleasures of (currently) fresh lungs - the chance to puff on a fat cigar.



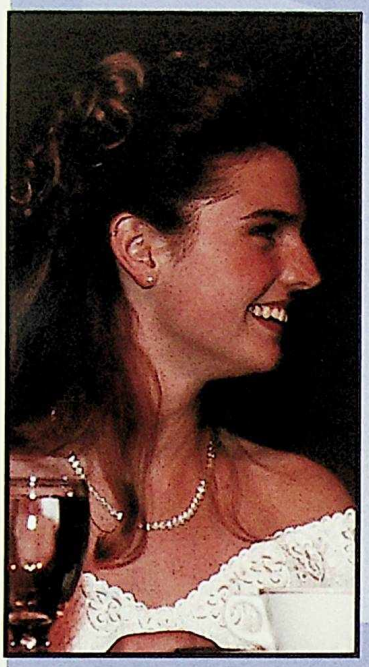
Shauna Begg and her date from out-of -town.





Adrianna D'Ilio chuckles as she delivers the toast to the school, responded to by Mr. Anderson.

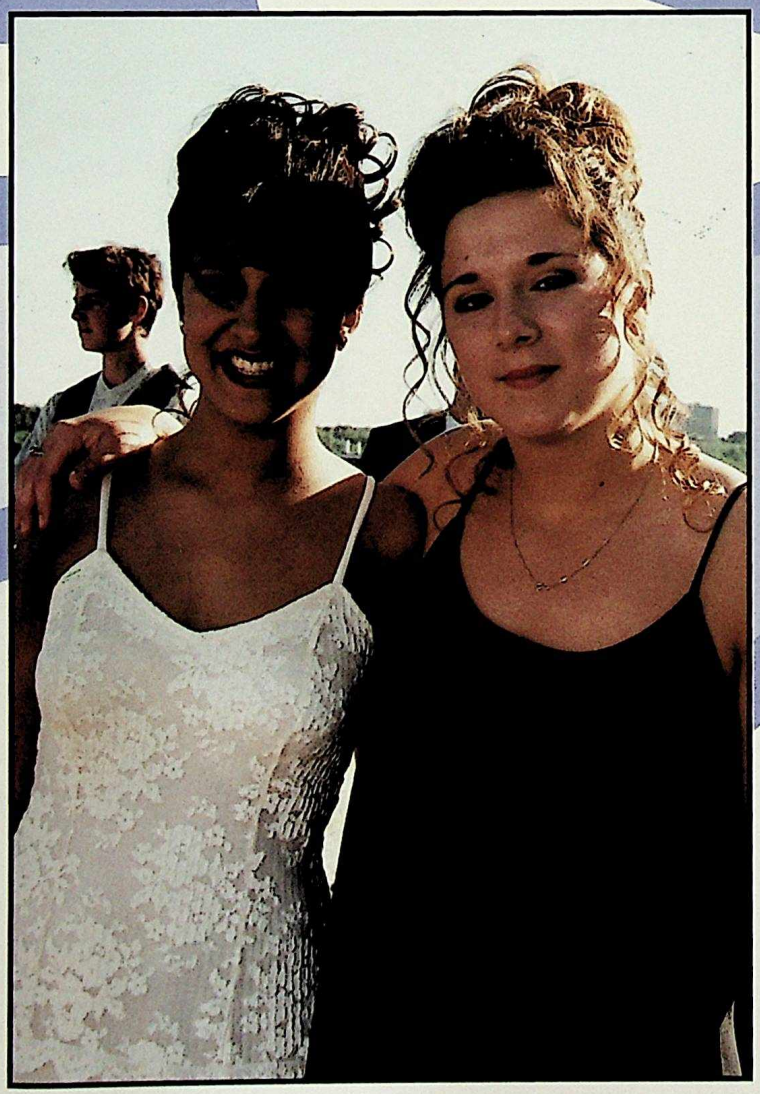
Dana Pierce, Grad President for 1995, converses with the other members of the head table.



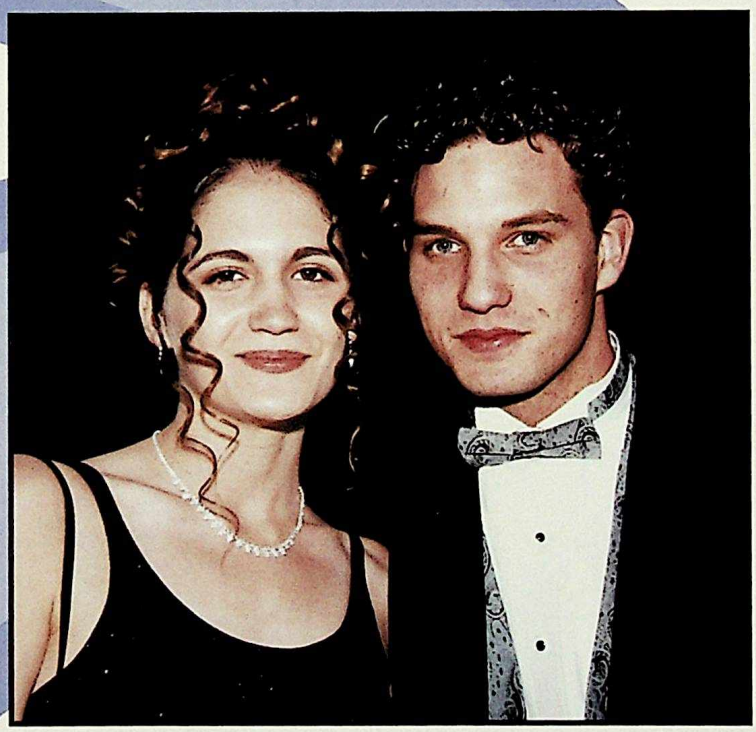
Forming Scona's most Irish trio are Miah McDade, Sheamus Murphy and Colin McGuire.

Perhaps Brice Reimenschneider has taken a cue from the animal kingdom in choosing his hairstyle.

Both before and after the banquet, friends lined up for group photos. This line was certainly one of the longest.



Rakhi Pancholi and Katie Caswell.



Karen Souza and Mike Fyk.

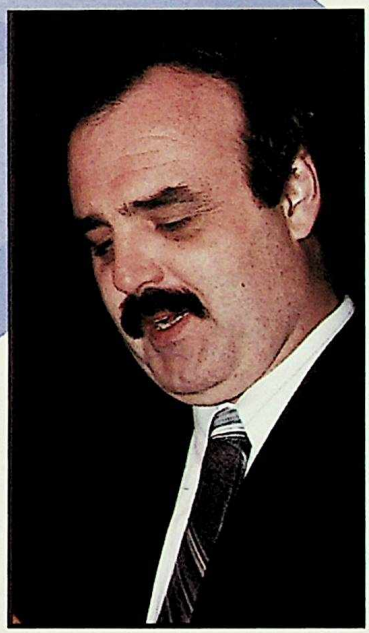
Mr. Kulka appears to be contemplating the choice of bread at the head table.

Sue Ponech responding to Davis Foth's toast to the graduating class of 1995.



Mr. Wallace responded to the toast to the teachers with a short but sincere message.

Sabrina Pare, Christa Gilroy and Kelly Oxford group together on the dance floor.

Sometimes cross-dressers are a real drag, but there is one authentic female here. Drag queen, drag queen, Amanda Fahlman, drag queen.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson during the evening meal.

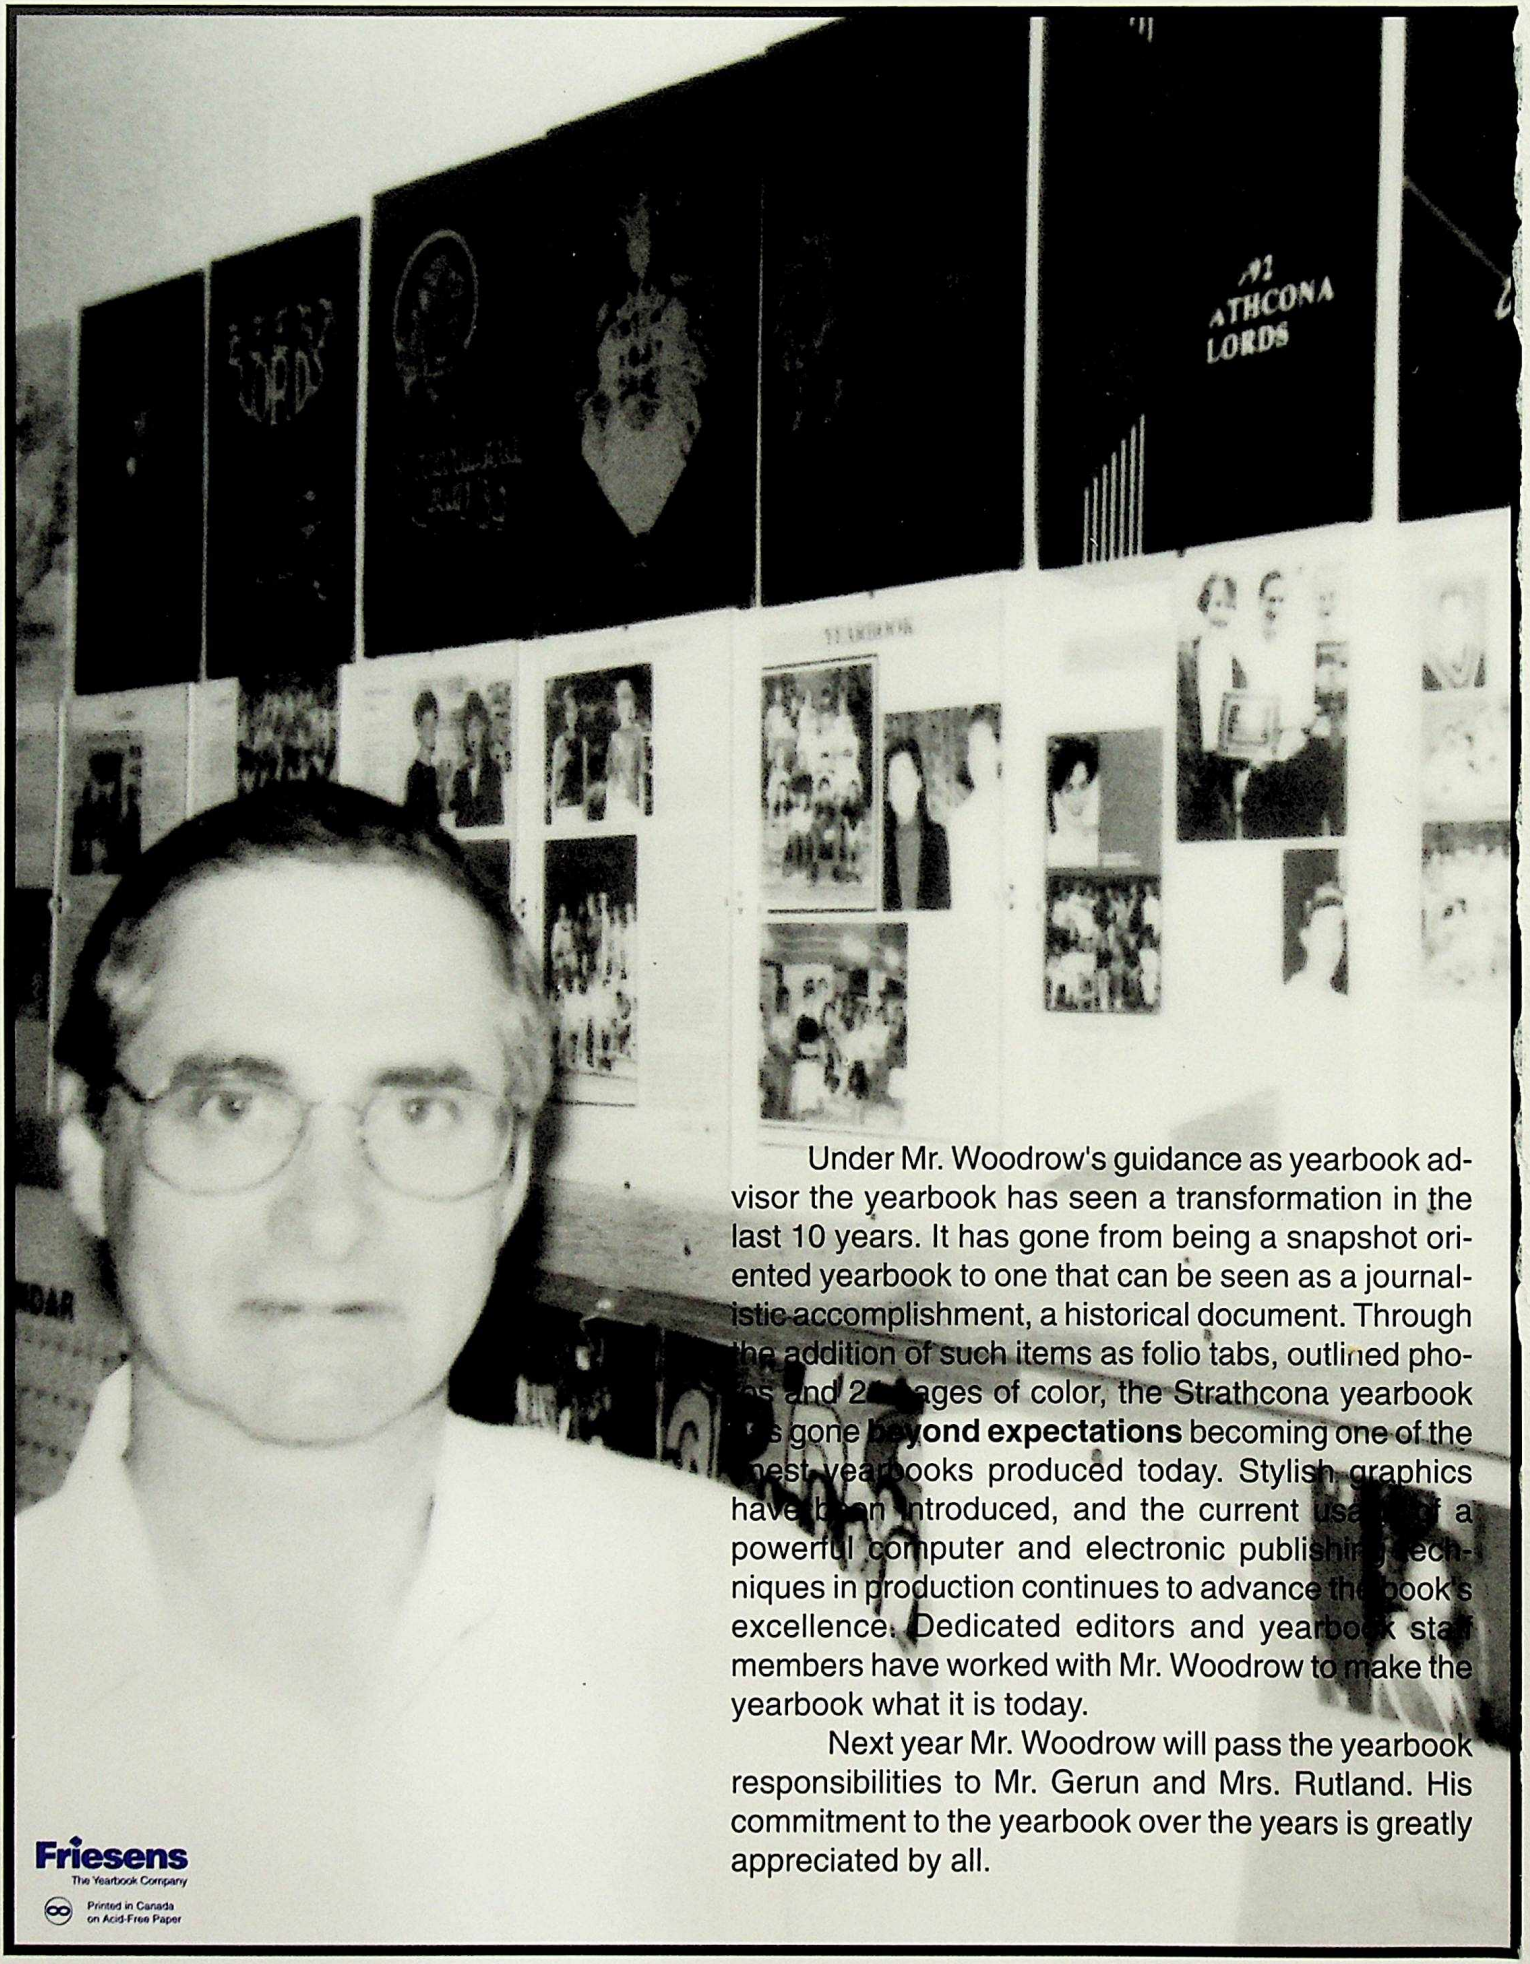
Zotello, Jessica-139



Under Mr. Woodrow's guidance as yearbook advisor the yearbook has seen a transformation in the last 10 years. It has gone from being a snapshot oriented yearbook to one that can be seen as a journalistic accomplishment, a historical document. Through the addition of such items as folio tabs, outlined photos and 2[illegible] pages of color, the Strathcona yearbook has gone beyond expectations becoming one of the finest yearbooks produced today. Stylish graphics have been introduced, and the current usage of a powerful computer and electronic publishing techniques in production continues to advance the book's excellence. Dedicated editors and yearbook staff members have worked with Mr. Woodrow to make the yearbook what it is today.

Next year Mr. Woodrow will pass the yearbook responsibilities to Mr. Gerun and Mrs. Rutland. His commitment to the yearbook over the years is greatly appreciated by all.
